POLICE RAID 'MISSOURI LOTTERY', FIVE HELD

SCHEME A FRAUD, DETECTIVES THINK

Venders in Sales Talk Represented That Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City Was Behind Enterprise.

The St. Louis office of the Missouri Lottery, tickets of which have been sold on the representation that it was conducted at Jefferson City, and backed by men of political influence, was raided by city detectives yesterday and five men were arrested. The office is in an apartment at 3658 West Pine boulevard.

Several thousand books of tickets for drawings announced to take place May 15, and for a drawing set for last Wednesday, May 1, were seized. The detectives found also a result sheet, showing in advance the numbers which were to win in the May 15 drawing. None of the numbers had their counterpart in any of the books of tickets seized, which were to be sold to the public.

Another discovery was a collection of photographs, purporting to show drawings and pictures of winners. A feminine figure in the pictures was that of a wax dummy, and the clothing used in dressing the dummy was found in the office.

No Evidence of Drawing. As no evidence was found that a drawing was held last Wednesday, it was believed that there had been a bona fide drawing or an actual distribution of prizes, the police believe the enterprise to have been a fake lottery. They believe the representations of ticket sellers as to the political backing of the lottery were also a fake.

Vendors of tickets in downtown St. Louis, as sales talk, that Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City was behind the lottery. No evidence to support this statement was discovered in the raid, and it was believed to have been a false representation. Recent inquiry in Jefferson City failed to show any trace of the enterprise there.

While the police believe the Missouri Lottery to have been a fake enterprise, this does not affect the character of the charges against the arrested men, as the operating of a bona fide lottery is a violation of State law.

The five men arrested on charges of operating a lottery gave these names and addresses: Dan Baker, also known as Henry Johnson, living at the Atlantic Hotel, 4321 Pine street, named by the others as in charge of the office. G. Robertson, 3320 Belt avenue. John J. Karst, 3311 Abner place. Fred Hildebrand, Creve Coeur. Alfred P. Heckert, 5121 Highland.

Two Caught After Chase. The detectives, after having the place under surveillance, arrested Robertson and Karst as they were leaving, carrying handbags which contained supplies of tickets. They said they were salesmen for Baker. Hildebrand was arrested outside the place soon afterward. When the detectives entered the building, Baker and Heckert ran out, but were pursued and caught.

An automobile in the garage behind the building was found to contain 1125 books of $1 tickets, and 2500 tickets, for the May 15 drawing, and 429 books of tickets for the drawing set for May 1. In the hotel room, occupied by Baker, the result sheet for the May 15 drawing, and a collection of police tickets were found.

The tickets, printed on the backs of the tickets, designated the first prize at $25,000; second $4000; third $2000; and other prizes of $1000 to $500 for combinations. It was stated that 16,418 prizes in all would be awarded. None of the arrested men could tell of anyone who had won a prize, though Karst had heard that a man had won $1000. The tickets bore the name of Charles Watson as director. Baker would make no statement. The others said they had been selling.

London Traffic Jammed By Crowds Gathered For the King's Jubilee

Ceremony at St. Paul's Tomorrow to Open Three-Month Celebration of 25 Years of Reign of George V

WOMAN PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM SIXTH STORY

Miss Mary Richter's Body Found on Driveway of Apartment at Grand and Russell.

Soon after she had been asked to get dinner for company, Miss Mary Richter, 36 years old, housekeeper in a sixth-floor apartment of Hutcheson Arms, Grand and Russell boulevards, fell or jumped from the dining room window and was killed. No one saw her fall.

A department store delivery man found the body lying on a concrete driveway at 2:15 p. m. Going into the apartment house lobby, the delivery man found one of the occupants of the apartment, Richard Dennie, 21 years old, who had been listening to a radio program in the lobby.

The apartment was taken two weeks ago by Robert A. Rohner, sales manager of a lace and embroidery firm, who came to St. Louis to open a branch office. Dennie, a salesman, shared the apartment with Rohner. Miss Richter, who had been living in Indianapolis, came here to take charge of the apartment.

Said She Was Not Well. Dennie told police that he went to the apartment to tell Miss Richter that Rohner planned to bring guests home for dinner. He said she told him that she was not well enough to do the necessary marketing and get dinner for company. He went downstairs and telephoned to Rohner, who said he would take his guests to dinner elsewhere. Dennie remained in the lobby until he learned of the fatality.

Miss Richter had been washing her hair, and had put on several metal curlers. She wore a blue house dress, and was without shoes. The window from which she fell was unsecured. The window sill was two and one-half feet from the floor.

Despondent Sometimes. From a survey of the physical surroundings, the police were unable to determine whether the fall was accidental. It was suggested, Miss Richter might have leaped from the open window to dry her hair, although the air was too cold to encourage this.

Rohner, who said he had known Miss Richter 16 years, said she had sometimes talked in a despondent tone, and that he once heard her threaten suicide.

Her mother, Mrs. Mary Richter of Jersey City, N. J., is believed to be her only near relative.

SENATORS DESERTING; HOUSE HIS BEST HOPE

Supreme Court Will Have Last Word, However—Decision in Test Case Possible May 27 or June 3

By the Associated Press. LONDON, May 4.—While thousands of merchants hurriedly reinforced their windows and bobbies made heroic efforts to unlace traffic blockades a crowd of millions surged through the central city area in high spirits.

From Buckingham Palace, where tens of thousands gathered hoping to glimpse the royal family, through Oxford and Bond streets, Piccadilly Circus, Trafalgar Square and the Strand, there was the same spectacle.

There was confusion earlier in the evening, with the throng for King George's silver jubilee, but when the theaters and public houses (saloons) closed at 11 p. m. and their crowds filled the streets simultaneously, the jam grew worse.

Wooden blockades were thrown across hundreds of little courts along the opening procession route to prevent rushes from the crowd.

Most of the city's carpenters were working until dawn to complete these as well as protective barriers for windows.

Good Weather Forecast. The weather man has forecast bright, Spring-like weather for the King's solemn procession to St. Paul's Cathedral Monday morning. There may, however, be local showers.

The King worked as usual today, holding, however, a special jubilee meeting of the Privy Council, at which he signed a proclamation calling for the issuance of three special Jubilee coins.

The proclamation calls for Crown pieces of general issue during the remainder of this year, for 25 gold pieces at 50 pounds sterling each, a handsome leather case for each of them, and for 2500 silver pieces of seven shilling, six pence each, in cardboard cases.

Nearly all work has been stopped until Monday, for Monday will be a holiday throughout the Empire.

City Alive With Color. The city is alive with color, flags and bunting are everywhere.

A final rehearsal of Monday's ceremonies at St. Paul's Cathedral was held today, an umbrella being used in place of the pearl-decorated sword of the city.

The King and Queen arriving at the Cathedral in their carriage shortly before 11:30 a. m. The most brilliant uniforms will make the assemblage a memorable picture.

With Diplomats, together with their military and naval aids, attending, as well as the highest officials of the British Government.

Only Four Others Remain. Of all the royal company that sat a throne in 1910, when George V became King, only four remain.

They are King Victor Emmanuel, who has ruled uninterruptedly since the beginning of the century; King Haakon, ruler of Norway since 1905; King Gustave, who ascended the throne of Sweden in 1907, and Queen Wilhelmina, who for 45 years has presided over the destiny of the Netherlands.

Months of preparations have gone into making the jubilee at once solemn and joyous. There will be three months of jubilee, beginning with Monday's public holiday, in which all persons under the British flag will join in expressions of "thanks giving to Almighty God for the protection to the King's majesty during the 25 years of his auspicious reign."

Thousands of foreigners are arriving for observance of the "rolling day. A new London of lights and flowers and banners has been created. Great Venetian masts have been placed to line the main thoroughfares and mark the royal route from the palace to St. Paul's Cathedral.

Temporary Seats Erected. The stately aisles of the cathedral which have echoed for a month to the clatter of hammers as banks of temporary seats were put in place, are quiet at last, ready for England's King and England's Queen.

The members of the royal family will take their places for the service directly under the cathedral's giant dome. Directly beneath the spot where they will be seated, the remains of Lord Nelson lie.

The dome, towering 365 feet, is a feature of London's skyline, and except for the cross that crowns it, is not unlike the Capitol dome at Washington, D. C.

Following the Cathedral service Monday, the King and Queen will return to the palace. All England will celebrate for the rest of the day and night.

King's Message. In the evening the King will deliver a message to his people everywhere—the subjects upon whom "the sun never sets." John Mase-

PHILIPPINES MAY ASK JAPAN TO GIVE UP REVOLT LEADER

Acting Governor-General Says Tokio Government Is Not Under Suspicion but Aid Was Sought.

RAMOS HAD SAID HE WAS GOING TO U. S.

By the Associated Press. MANILA, May 5 (Sunday)—While Acting Governor-General Joseph R. Hayden was announcing the Government had no suspicion that Japan had a hand in the Sakdalista revolt, other insular leaders discussed today the feasibility of extraditing Benigno Ramos, Sakda leader, from Tokio on sedition charges.

"The Insular Government has no evidence that the Japanese were in any way implicated," said Hayden on his arrival here after a fast trip from a remote mountain province.

Secretary of the Interior Teofilo Sison said he would confer with Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo on whether to seek the return here of the extremist who had just disclosed he was seeking to enlist aid for his cause in Japan.

Release Is Optional. Insular authorities said a treaty between the United States and Japan provided means for extraditing the Nationals of either country for certain offenses, but that the granting of a request such as in the present case was optional.

They raised the question of whether Japan might consider Ramos a political refugee and decline to turn him over to Philippine authorities.

Ramos' appeal for funds in Japan to "free the Philippines" recalled statements by his followers here that they had given money to send the leader to the United States "to confer with Roosevelt," with view to obtaining immediate independence for the islands.

Spurious Pictures Seized. The Constabulary seized spurious photographs showing Ramos "confering" with the President. These pictures had been circulated among the uninformed Sakdalistas before their outbreak earlier this week, which cost 60 lives in three provinces.

Jose Guido of the Constabulary Intelligence, denied published reports quoting him as saying Ramos directed the uprising from Japan.

Filipino leaders expressed confidence that the Government would have no effect on the plebiscite to be held May 14, in which the Filipinos people will vote on ratification of a Commonwealth Constitution.

If ratified, the Constitution will serve as the foundation for a transitional Government which will serve the islands for 10 years. Thereafter the Philippines will become an independent Republic.

Outwardly, the situation remained quiet in the affected provinces today, but Constabulary authorities said danger spots would be guarded until the plebiscite.

Four Men Held; Said to Be Members of Suppressed Anti-Semitic Organization.

BRAZILIAN CITY PROCLAIMS 'STATE OF PUBLIC CALAMITY'

At Least 60 Killed, 1000 Homeless at Bahia After Five Days of Wind and Rain.

By the Associated Press. BAHIA, Brazil, May 4.—A "state of public calamity" was officially proclaimed in this city of 330,000 population today after five consecutive days of unprecedented wind and rain storms had taken many lives.

Authorities estimated at least 60 persons died in the storms, while unofficial estimates for Bahia and the surrounding area ran as high as 400. Hundreds were injured.

The howling winds and the driving rains abated somewhat tonight, enabling authorities to go ahead with plans for relief. They estimated those without homes at 1000 or more. Alms houses and army barracks were used for hospitals.

Halting of railroad traffic sent prices for foodstuffs up. It was thought at least 500 homes in the city and suburbs collapsed, either as result of the torrential rains or landslides. The famous old Hotel Paris looking out on Bahia's bay, which rivals Rio de Janeiro's for beauty, was in ruins, as was many another historic building.

WARDEN FLOGS PRISONERS, IN SPIRIT OF OWN FEELINGS

New Delaware Officer Carrying Out Court Sentence, Sees "Cat" For First Time.

By the Associated Press. WILMINGTON, Del., May 4.—Elwood E. Wilson, new Warden of the New Castle County workhouse, after flogging three prisoners on Court order said: "I never saw a whipping before and I never had a desire to see one, but I will not permit to own feelings in any way to interfere with the performance of my duty. I saw the 'cat' used in the whippings, for the first time last night.

The prisoners flogged were: Ezekiel George, sentenced to serve three years in prison for larceny of coal from the Pennsylvania Railroad; Norman Gaines, sentenced to two years for breaking into the office of a coal company, and Amos Camper, sentenced to three years in prison for entering a dwelling.

PERU MEETS SILVER CRISIS

Authorities Issue of Paper When Coins Are Hoarded.

By the Associated Press. LIMA, Peru, May 4.—The Peruvian Government authorized the reserve bank tonight to issue one sol paper notes (about 50 cents) to meet the difficulties created by hoarding of silver coins, following the rise in the price of silver.

"As the new issues of paper money will be made by the reserve bank to exchange five, ten, 50 and 100 sol notes," the Finance Ministry's communique said, "there will not be monetary inflation of any kind, which fact should be duly taken into consideration to appreciate the real meaning of the measures."

NAZI PLANE FOUND; GENERAL AND SIX OTHERS ARE DEAD

Ship Missing Since April 30, Crashed Into Fichtel Mountains on Way to Breslau.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. BERLIN, May 4.—Seven persons, including Maj. Gen. Hoerling, his wife and his child, were found dead today in the wreckage of a Junkers transport plane that had crashed into the Fichtel Mountains in Bavaria.

The plane had been officially reported missing yesterday when the Government reported it had not been heard from since April 30, when it left Stuttgart for Breslau.

Discovery of the wreckage ended search in which the governments of Czechoslovakia and Poland had joined.

Searchers believed the pilot had crashed into a hillside when a heavy snowstorm obscured his vision.

Gen. Hoerling was Division Commander in Reichswacht. Others in the plane were an aviation officer, one instructor, and two air cadets.

Lawyer Reilly, Ousted as Defense Counsel, Seeks $22,398 in Fees.

By the Associated Press. BROOKLYN, May 4.—Edward J. Reilly, ousted as chief of the Hauptmann defense counsel, has sued Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of the man convicted of killing the Lindbergh baby, for $22,398, which he claims as a fee.

The suit was disclosed today when Supreme Court Justice Mitchell May granted an order to Maurice Edelbaum, a legal associate of Reilly, directing Mrs. Hauptmann to show cause in the Brooklyn Supreme Court, May 10, why she should not be enjoined from disposing of funds now in her possession and why the funds should not be placed in trust so that Reilly might collect for services and expenses. Mrs. Hauptmann dismissed Reilly April 3 after he had sent her a bill for $25,000. In computing his bill, Reilly said he had spent $4671 of his own money after entering the case last November and that his legal services were "reasonably worth" $25,000. He said he had received only $7362.

Son of Victim Says That Another Car Forced Them Off Road—He Was in Rumble Seat, Not Seriously Hurt.

By the Associated Press. SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 4.—Four persons were killed and Jackie Coogan, famous film juvenile, was injured late today in the plunge of the Coogan car down a roadside embankment in the mountains 55 miles east of San Diego.

The dead: Robert Horner, Los Angeles. Charles Jones, foreman of the Coogan ranch at Pine Valley.

The injuries of Jackie Coogan, who rose to film fame as "The Kid" in Charlie Chaplin's picture of that name, were reported not to be serious.

He was taken by a passing motorist to the grocery at Pine Valley and treated there by a local physician. Another physician was believed en route by plane from Burbank.

Forced From Road. Jackie told M. E. Magee, the motorist who dragged him from the wreckage of the Coogan car, that the accident happened when they were forced from the road by a passing machine.

The Coogan car, he said, crashed into a pile of rocks, rolled over four times and came to rest right side up.

Jackie said he was unable to identify the machine which forced their car from the road. He was riding in the rumble seat of the Coogan automobile and was not thrown out.

John Coogan, Durkin, Horner and Jones apparently were killed outright.

The bodies of Durkin and the elder Coogan were thrown from the car in its flight, while those of the others were pinned in the wreckage.

Mrs. Coogan arrived here in a specially chartered plane from Burbank tonight and left immediately for the Coogan ranch, escorted by State motorcycle police.

With her were Patricia Ellis, film actress; Alexander Leftwich, former New York stage director and father of Miss Ellis; Mrs. Sherry Jones, owner of the Ziegfeld Theater in New York City; Dr. H. G. Westphal of Glendale, and A. L. Burnstein, Jackie Coogan's manager.

SENATE TO VOTE FOR CASH BONUS, DEMOCRATS SAY

Main Issue, Leaders Think, Is Whether Patman Bill or Vinson Measure Will Be Favored.

Administration Supporters Still Working for Harrison Compromise—Choice of Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, May 4.—Democratic leaders conceded privately today the Senate would vote full cash payment of the soldiers' bonus next week, despite warnings that President Roosevelt would veto it. Administration leaders were still working over the week-end, however, for the Harrison compromise, which the President is reported willing to sign.

The only question seemed to be whether the Senate would favor the inflationary Patman bill, already approved by an overwhelming House majority, or the American Legion sponsored Vinson measure, providing for payment of the certificates out of ordinary revenues. Back of the bonus measure, a jam of administration legislation is pending in the Senate. Congress, in its fifth month, has passed only one major Roosevelt measure, the relief bill.

Strategic Move Considered. Democratic leaders predicted, however, a veto of the Patman bill would be sustained in the Senate, but they were doubtful whether they could uphold a veto of the more conservative Vinson measure. For that reason, they were considering throwing their strength to the inflationary bill as a strategic move. Republican leaders, who are supporting the Vinson plan, flatly predicted it could be passed over a veto.

Once the veterans issue is out of the way, administration leaders said, Congress would begin work on the legislative program recommended by the President. They plan to call up the NRA extension resolution immediately after passage of the bonus, probably Tuesday or Wednesday. Monday, the Senate Finance Committee will begin work in executive session on the social security bill, which next to NRA legislation is considered by Democrats the session's most essential piece of legislation.

General debate on the controversial omnibus bank bill was concluded in the House today and the measure will be taken up Wednesday for amendments and final action. Further long hearings, however, were in sight on the Senate side.

Bonus Fight Starts Tomorrow. When the Senate meets Monday it will face a vote on substituting the Vinson bonus bill for the Harrison compromise which was approved by leaders yesterday with an adjournment to give them a chance to reform their lines.

Despite the administration effort to rally support for the compromise, a check-up today indicated the Vinson measure would win easily. Then it will face a test with the Patman bill.

Speaker Byrns said today "if the Senate approves the Vinson bill, I expect the House will give it as big a majority as it did the Patman bill." The Democratic whip, Representative Boland, of Pa., said "it looks to me like any cash payment bonus bill would get a two-thirds majority in the House."

also drew impersonations on occasion and one evening at San Francisco he made such a hit doing a shimmy dance Miss Kellerman wanted him in the act, but Jackie's father refused.

He repeated his brief routine in Los Angeles a short time later, however. Charlie Chaplin saw him and persuaded the Coogans to let him use Jackie in "The Kid."

After Jackie grew up he quit pictures for several years but lately he has appeared again in several. Robert, while not so well known as his brother, appeared in "Skiway," "Sooky," "The Miracle Man," and "Ski Bride."

Although Jackie's actual earnings as a juvenile actor were never made public by his parents, they were estimated at between $250,000 and $500,000. He is 19 years old.

field, the poet laureate, will read a hymn of thanksgiving, has written in honor of the jubilee.

The celebration is not restricted to London, or to England. All parts of the Empire will take part. Northern Ireland will be among the most enthusiastic of the celebrants, for the reign of King George has been momentous in her history.

Almost all Ulster will be aflame with hundreds of bonfires, fireworks displays and beacons. Ulstermen boast there will be more bonfires to the square mile than in any other part of the British Empire. The Ulster hillsides will be linked by a chain of fiery beacons, touched off Monday night. Tons of fuel will feed the fires, and rockets will make the sky a zigzag of light.

The children will have holidays from their books. The cinema doors will be open to them free. And there will be parades—parades—parades. The Highlands of Scotland, too, will blaze that night, as hardy Scots climb the highest hills to touch off the beacons. All the peaks around Balmoral Castle, the King's home in the Highlands, will be turned with fire; and bonfires will blaze on the Braes of Mar, where the standard was raised in the rebellion of 1715.

Indeed, the length of the British Isles will be marked with lights, with not a point in the country out of sight of an answering fire. Light will blaze Britain's Thanksgiving from Land's End to John O'Groats. The Irish Free State will not join in the celebration.

To Represent United States. Ambassador Robert W. Bingham will represent the United States Government and the American people at the Thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He will participate in the spectacle along with the Ambassadors and Ministers of other foreign nations. Accompanying him will be Mrs. Bingham, Ray Atherton, Counselor of the Embassy and Mrs. Atherton, and the military and naval attaches. Lieutenant-Colonel Cortlandt Parker and Captain Walter S. Anderson and their wives. Ambassador Bingham and Counselor Atherton will be among the few men without uniform. The attaches, however, will wear the full dress uniforms of the American army and navy.

Members of the American diplomatic corps have been invited also to attend two state balls to be held during the jubilee, including the Gullhall Ball, and to the Army and navy reviews before the King.

The American colony will take part on Tuesday night in the British-American ball, one of the social features of the jubilee. It is under the patronage of the Prince of Wales who will be 41 years old seven weeks hence.

KANSAS CITY COP WHO LOST APPEAL SEEKS REHEARING

U. S. Circuit Court Upheld Perjury Conviction of L. C. Claiborne, Who Aided Gangster.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 4.—Attorneys for Leonard L. Claiborne, former city detective and a central figure in the murder trial of Charles Gargotta, gangster and political leader here, announced today they would file a motion for a rehearing before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which yesterday upheld a Federal perjury conviction against him.

The motion, which appeals from a ruling that the former police officer must serve a four-year term, must be filed within 30 days. Claiborne's testimony in a State court contributed to the acquittal of Gargotta, charged with the murder of Ferris Anthon, a liquor runner, and constituted the high link in one of the most bizarre trials in American criminal annals.

Sheriff Thomas Bash of Jackson County, who arrested Gargotta, a henchman of the late Johnny Lazia, North Side political leader and Pendergast lieutenant, had testified he apprehended Gargotta, red-handed, the scene of the murder, headed his pleas for mercy and refrained from shooting him after Gargotta begged for mercy after firing at him. The Sheriff produced a pistol which he said Gargotta dropped as he arrested him.

Claiborne, who as a city detective, reached the scene shortly afterward, identified the pistol mentioned by the Sheriff as one he had picked up between two houses near the scene. His identification was backed by identification tags on the weapon.

Gargotta was acquitted, but Claiborne was promptly arrested by Federal authorities, who were inquiring into stolen Army pistols used in the gang murder interrupted by Sheriff Bash.

Subsequent investigation developed that the pistol was not the one which Claiborne swore he picked up. He was not manufactured until months after the date he said he used it. Federal agents testified that Claiborne admitted obeying orders to "juggle" the tags on stolen Army pistols. In the hope of a promotion through political influence, he said, he was sent to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Mo., where he was charged and it was proved, convincingly and conclusively. It was high time that something was done to put down perjury in our courts.

BEER PRICE-CUTTER MURDERED

Chicago Gunmen Stop ex-Convict's Truck, Take Turns Firing.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, May 4.—Anton Zalatouris, also known as Frank Young, was killed by three gunmen today because, police said, he sold beer for $12.50 a barrel instead of the usual $17.

The truck on which he was riding, driven by Joseph A. Gaidauskas, who was unharmful, was stopped by men in an automobile, who then took turns firing at Zalatouris. Deputy Coroner Gerber said the killing was gang vengeance, because each of the men fired in turn, so that all would be equally guilty. Police said Zalatouris had been identified as an ex-convict who had participated in a $40,000 swindle in a Loop bank 17 years ago. He later was arrested in Montana with $37,000 of the loot in a money belt. While being returned to Chicago he made a sensational escape from the train, but was recaptured. He was released from the Pontiac Reformatory in 1922.

THINKS BACHELORS OVER 35 SELDOM WORTH MARRYING

Family Relations Authority Advises Home Girl to Make Her Bargain Early.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, May 4.—Statistically speaking, says Paul Popenoe of the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations, there are "very few" bachelors over 35 "who are worth marrying."

He explains "they comprise a preponderance of mental and physical defectives or men whose outlook is so warped, so infantile or egocentric that even the most optimistic maiden, willing to marry a man to reform him, would recognize this particular job as hopeless."

Popenoe's advice on "where are the marriageable men?" was presented before the American Eugenics Society today by A. E. Wiggam of New York. Summarizing, he said most all men under 35 who marry pick women one jog farther down the age-ladder than they are, and that therefore the highest-type, best-educated women fail to marry.

As for the home girl hopeful of picking a husband, Popenoe says she better make her bargain at 21, for she'll have a wide range of choice, whereas if she waits until 31, "she may have virtually no choice at all."

That's one reason he gives for why girls this tip-invoice the junior chamber of commerce and not the "frat" boys to their next dance. College boys, he says, can't afford wives.

KENTUCKY FARMER GETS LIFE TERM FOR KILLING BOY SCOUT

Jury Reaches Verdict in 30 Minutes; Both Sides Criticize Gov. Laffoon for Sending Troops.

By the Associated Press. PIKEVILLE, Ky., May 4.—Denver Tolliver, 25-year-old Letcher County farmer, was convicted of murder today and the penalty fixed at life imprisonment in the killing of Clyde Quillen, 15-year-old Boy Scout. A Pike County jury, which received the case on a change of venue, reached a verdict in 30 minutes.

The State did not announce whether it would press charges against Tolliver in the shooting of Scoutmaster Cosette Quillen, Clyde's cousin who was blinded by a shotgun charge shortly before Clyde Quillen was fatally wounded on the night of March 16.

Commonwealth's Attorney Childers and Defense Attorney W. A. Daugherty in their final arguments to the jury both criticized Gov. Ruby Laffoon for his action in sending State troops to Letcher County to investigate the shooting. The troops were requested by the American Legion post.

Tolliver pleaded self-defense, testifying he fired at Clyde Quillen because he mistook him for a neighbor with whom he had had trouble. Tolliver said he thought the neighbor had come to kill him. He denied that he fired on the party of Boy Scouts, to which Clyde and Cosette Quillen belonged because he objected to their camping on his land.

VOLCANIC ACTIVITY IN ARARAT AFTER QUAKES REPORTED

Subterranean Rumbles in Noah's Traditional Landing Place—2000 Dead or Injured.

By the Associated Press. ISTANBUL, May 4.—Mount Ararat, in Armenia, on which, tradition says, Noah's ark landed, is reported to be showing volcanic activity, following earthquakes in which 2000 persons are reported to have been killed or injured. A total of 1600 houses is said to have been destroyed and 25 villages wiped out. The volcanic activity in the peak, 17,000 feet high, was noticed after the first of seven major shocks in the Kars region near the Turkish-Russian border. According to reports received here, activity of Mount Ararat was confined to subterranean rumbles without any eruptions.

Tass (official Soviet news agency) dispatches to Moscow quote reports from Teheran, Persia, that 500 persons had been killed and many injured, and at least three villages destroyed in Mazandaran province by earthquakes.

Increasing panic in the stricken area is the unusual phenomenon of red water rushing through fissures in the earth, some of them said to be 30 feet wide, opened by the quakes.

The Tass dispatch placed the center of the earthquake about 55 miles southeast of the town of Saki.

With virtually every house in the center of the Digor district demolished, the population was camping in tents, suffering intensely from cold. Thousands of dead cattle scattered over the stricken area gave rise to fears of an epidemic. Squads of laborers and troops are doing relief work.

GOERING JAILS MORE PASTORS

Despite Activity Protestant Clergy Persists in Course.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, May 4.—Gen. Hermann Goering's secret state police held the whip hand today over recalcitrant opposition pastors, 40 of whom have been sent to concentration camps or prison. Arrests were still continuing, especially in the provinces. Vicar Fraenkel was taken to Oppeln Prison, charged with making derogatory remarks against the state. Pastor Bueltemeyer of Dortmund also was arrested.

Pastor Senger of Berlin was taken to "temporary custody" Wednesday, but was reported today still in jail. Despite the increased activity of Nazi authorities against them, the opposition Protestant clergy persisted steadfastly in its course. Services and prayers were ordered by the Prussian Confessional Synod to be held each Wednesday.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Jewelry worth $100,000 was forgotten in a taxicab today, and it was several hours before police traced the cab and recovered the jewels for a Park avenue matron. Mrs. Ralph Miller, whose son, Ralph, is in the diplomatic service in Washington, was the owner.

ROOSEVELT FACES FIGHT IN CONGRESS TO SAVE THE NRA

The apparent strategy was to keep the representatives of big industries from giving the impression that the NRA was doing more for employers than for employees. The committee's vote on the Clark resolution came as a surprise to Richberg, who rushed to the Senate after he heard about it, but he was too late. The strategy probably will be changed at the House hearings and there will be a succession of witnesses to tell why the NRA should be continued for two years instead of until April 1.

Court to Have Last Word. The Supreme Court, of course, will have the last word and if it hands down a decision on May 27 or June 3, the two remaining decision days of the present term, its opinion will be the deciding factor with Congress. If the court waits until the next term, beginning in October, the advocates of the Clark resolution will be solidified. The Senate Finance Committee has unmistakably indicated that many Senators want to know whether the present act is constitutional, before they take chances by accepting another administration NRA bill.

Two Firemen Killed in Collision. By the Associated Press. ALBANY, N. Y., May 4.—Two firemen were killed and four others were injured when a pumper truck and a battalion chiefs car collided and overturned at a three-way street intersection here today. The men killed were: Capt. Frank P. Miller and Thomas H. Rogers.

RUSSIA SHOWS 3000 MILITARY AIRPLANES

800 in Far East Sector—Demonstrates Strength in Tanks Also.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 4.—Russia's full military strength in the air was officially disclosed for the first time today. The Soviet now has more than 3000 military planes. It is announced, more than 800 of which are concentrated in the Far East. Participating in May day maneuvers were the Far Eastern group of 800 bombers, fighting planes and pursuit ships which roared back and forth across Red Square in Moscow, 350 ships in Leningrad, 350 at Minsk near the Polish border, 300 at Kiev, 170 at Kharkov and 100 at Rostov-on-Don in the North Caucasian area.

At Moscow, 500 tanks took part in the military demonstration and 2000 at eight other important cities. Gen. Vasily Blucher, chief of the Far Eastern army, said in an address at Chita, that in 1921 Russia had only three tanks and four airplanes in the Far East. The Soviet's Asiatic forces "now have been tremendously increased, and may be counted on to cope with a first class army of imperialists," Blucher added.

Warnings of the danger of war appeared in the Moscow Press, side by side with praise of the Franco-Soviet pact, with Za Industrialskiu, the Government's organ for heavy industry, mentioning the Far East specifically as one danger spot.

Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, declared Poland and Germany would be welcomed into the Franco-Soviet pact, if they wished to enter, and the press as a whole expressed the hope that the Baltic nations—Finland, Latvia and Estonia—would come in.

FLYERS' SKELETONS FOUND

Near Wrecked Plane in Mexico; Thought to Be Missing Spaniards.

By the Associated Press. MEXICO, D. F., May 4.—A dispatch to the newspaper Excelsior said tonight Indians in an isolated region of the mountainous southern state of Oaxaca reported finding the skeletons of two men near the wreckage of an airplane.

The bodies were believed possibly to be those of the Spanish flyers, Baraban and Collar, who disappeared nearly two years ago when flying from Havana to Mexico after a non-stop flight from Seville, Spain, to Cuba.

SECOND MURDER CHARGE AGAINST OKLAHOMA DOCTOR

Dr. E. G. Brewer, Accused of Performing Fatal Illegal Operations on Woman College Student.

FRIENDS RAISE

Physician-Philanthropist in Jail at Enid, Ok., on Previous Similar Allegation.

By the Associated Press.
ENID, Ok., May 4.—A second murder charge, accusing him of causing the death through an illegal operation of Hermione Power, 20-year-old Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College student, was filed today against Dr. E. G. Brewer, already held on another similar charge.

The information was filed by County Attorney Roy Holbird and signed by Lieut. Robert Huston, special investigator for Gov. Mar-land, whose secret investigation preceded the filing of the original charge.

Miss Fowler died at her home in Enid, Ok., June 27, 1934.
The first charge filed against the physician was based on the death of Mrs. Doris Jones, 20 years old, the mother of two children.

The complaint in the case of Mrs.
Jones was signed by her husband, Victor Jones, a grocery clerk, since discharged, who set forth he did not know his wife had gone to the doctor until she became ill.

Holbird said his investigation had developed two additional deaths of young women from illegal operations. He said more charges would be filed.

The prosecutor portrayed the 55-year-old bachelor physician and philanthropist as "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" in a formal statement charging Dr. H. G. Bennett, president of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater, for defending the doctor.

Defended by College Head.
Dr. Bennett said: "If I should be called as a character witness, I would say Dr. Brewer was as kind and as gentle a man as I ever met.
Before you will see a student upping on the campus such as you saw before when Dr. Brewer might become known. I cannot conceive of Dr. Brewer's violating laws. I knew him as a kind and generous country doctor who gave me the best of his time."

Dr. Brewer helped pay the way of many students through benefactions to students.

Many years ago, friends said, Dr.
Brewer became interested in the efforts of needy young men to attain an education because of his early hardships. He provided financial aid for one or two young fellow students. Each year more came to him. At length he purchased a house for his proteges at Stillwater, where Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College is situated.

Room rent was free, groceries were provided, there was a "house mother" and money for tuition and books was provided by the doctor.

For a while the boys had occasional dances attended by woman students, but two years ago the dances were discontinued at the request of the physician.

Finally his benefactions increased to the point that two large two-story houses near the campus, were filled with students who had no other means for getting an education, and operating on his bounty. At the time the students were going through school at Dr. Brewer's expense. When he was arrested he was maintaining 45 students in school. At his home in Garber even high school boys are living.

All over Northern Oklahoma there are young men, graduated now and working at their professions, who are known as "Dr. Brewer's boys."

His only stipulation in helping them, they said, was that they help others to get an education. Some women students, friends said, also went to him and received help.

Gypsy Queen and Son Who Becomes King

LILY CHEWCHKI (above), who died and left her throne to her son, "Chief" George Chewchki

Death of Queen Lily Makes
"Chief" George Chewchki Leader of Tribe.

Lily Chewchki Choctaw Indian queen of the Mitchell tribe of gypsies, was buried yesterday afternoon in Park Lawn Cemetery, after which about 300 members of the clan returned to their camp in a grove on Lemay Ferry road, three miles south of the city limits, to resume their mourning.

Conspicuous among them was her eldest son, the burly and battered wrestler, "Chief" George Chewchki, who was announced as the new king of the tribe after Queen Lily had died Thursday in the Lemay Ferry road grove, following a stroke of paralysis.

After lying in state in a tent in the camp since Friday night, the body of the queen was borne to St.
Colombille's Catholic Church, at Michigan avenue and Davis street, for funeral services, and from there to the cemetery for interment.

Wrestler's Claim.
The new king, who once ate most of straw but belonging to a ringside spectator at the Arena as he clawed back into the ring after having been tossed out by an opponent, claims his succession as the heir of Queen Lily and her husband, King Waso Chewchki, a gypsy from Jugoslavia, who died two months ago in Nashville, Tenn., after having led his clan in its wanderings in this country for 45 years.

He said yesterday that he would have to leave the tribe for a few days during the next three weeks to fulfill present wrestling engagements, but that he would return to the tribe to be its active leader. As a wrestler he has chiefly attracted attention by using a blackjack, sandpaper, thumbtacks and other items in attempts to defeat his opponents.

It was again fair, the "Chief" used to say in explaining his bizarre brand of attack, because he was busy avenging the wrongs done the Indians by the palefaces. It was only yesterday that sports writers learned for the first time of his gypsy blood. The publicity men had overlooked that.

Nine Days of Mourning.
In honor of the queen the tribe will mourn for nine days, then bury its sorrow in a festival of eating and dancing. During the mourning time, the new king told a Post-Dispatch reporter, gypsies custom demands that no male member of the tribe shall take a bath, shave or remove his clothing.

Within a few weeks the tribe will be on its way again, somewhere, in its fleet of Cadillacs, Lincolns, Packards, La Salles and Fords. In the Autumn it will make its way to Oklahoma, where a two-day festival will be held and the "Chief" will be formally installed as king.

Married 40 years to King Waso,
rain, Eli, Willie, Slatcho and Alex, two daughters, Emma and Salome, and about 30 grandchildren. All are with the tribe, which is composed for the most part of blood relatives.

Mrs. Samuel Robinson, a 31-year-

GALLUP KIDNAPING 'FRAME-UP,' SAYS PROSECUTOR'S AID

C. R. McIntosh Calls Red Editor, Who Reported He and Lawyer Were Abducted, 'Liar.'

By the Associated Press.
GALLUP, N. M., May 4.—Shouts of "liar" and accusations of "frame-ups" on both sides broke up a hospital conference today of a New York Communist and Philadelphia lawyer with one of the principal investigators of their asserted abduction and abandonment in the desert.

"The investigation is closed," C.
R. McIntosh, an Assistant District Attorney, told Robert Minor, editor of the Daily Worker, and David Levinson, the lawyer.

Minor and Levinson have been working in behalf of 10 unemployed men accused of murder as the outgrowth of a riot in Gallup April 4, in which three persons were killed.
Minor and Levinson said hooded men seized them Thursday night, took them to desert and beat them.

Governor Still Investigating.
At Santa Fe Gov. Tingle reiterated that his instructions "still stand" and "investigators for the State Police will remain in Gallup until the case is solved or as long as there is any possible hope of clearing up the matter."

McIntosh went to the hospital where Minor and Levinson were under watch by State Police and their associates in the Gallup defense. Minor accused McIntosh of winning at a nearby reporter when Levinson asked that investigators touch his cold hands and warm forehead to see that he was ill.

"You are a liar," McIntosh said.
"This is a complete indication of your attitude. Mr. McIntosh, toward running down these cowardly kidnapers by using the words 'liar' when you are seeking co-operation," said Minor, adding: "This is another 'frameup.' He had described the riot as a 'frame-up.'"

Calls Kidnaping 'Frame-Up.'
"Yes, this kidnaping is a frame-up," replied McIntosh.

McIntosh said he took full responsibility for calling Minor a liar.
Minor brought the meeting to an end by saying to McIntosh: "You will now leave the room. We have full knowledge of your attitude toward the kidnapers. They are safe in your hands."

The injuries of Levinson and Minor were described by Dr. P. L.
Travers as one cut for Levinson and five cuts for Minor.

Dr. Travers said the wounds could not have been made with a blackjack, that the skin layer had not been cut all the way through and that the blows struck had been at a pressure of not greater than six pounds.

Investigators were studying information for the men's shoes and clothing were without traces of mud when they reappeared, although they told of a night of wandering in a rain.

Trackers found inscribed on a door at an Indian hut the words:
"Robert Minor and David Levinson kidnaped May 2, 1935. Stopped her (obviously meant for here) May third early morning."

vention of Kentucky Colonels.

By MARGARET ALLEN RUHL, Society Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 5.—A drenching rain, which has become almost as much of Kentucky Derby tradition as the race itself, poured over Churchill Downs today where more than 40,000 persons had gathered. It was the sixty-first running of the Derby. The temperature dropped perceptibly this morning, adding cold weather to the customary dampness.

The rain, which began with an intermittent drizzle before noon, fell harder as entries were called for the first race, and before Omaha flashed down the stretch to win, a forlorn soaking-wet multitude was huddled for warmth and protection under covered stands and in the betting ring until every inch of standing room was packed to the limit. Notables from the social and sporting world all over the United States were there but it is doubtful if any of them could have been recognized by 4 o'clock. Those not covered by slickers and raincoats were jammed in groups under umbrellas and newspapers, and some even under Indian blankets.

Drab Tones Fit Weather.
Costumes varied from fur coats and muffs to light colored print frocks, knitted suits and tweeds.
The Derby devotees of today have learned by experience to obey a generally accurate weather man, and to dress accordingly. The few who defied him probably regretted it soon after the arrival. Consequently instead of a colorful crowd it was a subdued one, browns and navy blues predominating.

What little color there was, was supplied by men as well as women. Their hats for instance, with colored bands, looked high plaid tweeds, and the men wore variety popular with cowpunchers.
Bright yellow ties were in favor, and pastel shaded waistcoats. One shining light of the radio world wore a pale blue overcoat then disguised himself with dark sun glasses.

One girl wore a beige flannel shirt, black waist length coat banded in beige fox, and black straw hat. Another was in mustard green with tweeds and a smart scarf and still another wore a yellow ensemble checked with an almost invisible black stripe. One of the best dressed women from St. Louis was Mrs. J. G. Taylor Spink, in a mattress suit which combined tones of orchid and raspberry and a brimmed orchid balisun straw hat to match her corsage. Her topcoat was trimmed with a blue fox collar.

More than the usual number of St. Louisans came down for the race. Their former custom of hiring hotel suites at exorbitant prices seems to have lost its appeal. Now some visit relatives or friends but most of the visitors live on trains.

MRS. E. MACK TRACY OBTAINS A DIVORCE

Former Widow of A. J. Siegel Obtains Restoration of That Name.

E. Mack Tracy, vice-president of the Capen Belting & Rubber Co., was divorced yesterday by Mrs. Ann Louise Tracy, who married him Jan.
28. She alleged general indignities.

Mrs. Tracy was the widow of Alfred J. Siegel, president of the Hut-ting Sash & Door Co., the Manchester Bank and the Mount City Box
$600,000 estate at his death in 1926.
Judge Hogan in Court of Domestic Relations, who granted the divorce, ordered the name of Siegel restored to her, at her request.

Entry of appearance was filed by Tracy simultaneously with the filing of the suit Friday. A special setting of the case was obtained by the plaintiff's counsel. Tracy did not attend the hearing, but was represented by counsel, who took no active part.

Mrs. Tracy testified she treated her husband kindly, but that April 17 they came to an understanding of their marital difficulties, deciding they could not get along together, whereupon Tracy left their apartment at the Park Plaza Hotel, agreeing that she was right and should get a divorce. She declared that he was morose, and disagreeable toward her, and drank to excess, humiliating her in the presence of friends. Her petition also alleged that he failed to make adequate provision for her support and subjected her to mental cruelty.

Mrs. William Cooper, 380 North
Taylor avenue, and Mrs. Walter Smith, Latinsinger road, St. Louis County, who had known her for about 25 years. In response to an inquiry by Judge Hogan, Mrs. Cooper said Tracy had been "very haughty toward his wife, like he was showing off."

Tracy has resided at 5105 Lindell drive. The marriage was performed at Mrs. Tracy's apartment at the Park Plaza by the Rev. Syvester-Tucker of St. Louis Cathedral, in the presence of a few relatives.

COL. MCCORMICK RIDICULES PLANS TO SHARE WEALTH

In Boston Speech Suggests Jim Farley as Manager of Ford Plant Under Such a Scheme.

By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, May 4.—Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, assailed administration policies, radicals and share-the-wealth advocates tonight in an address at Faneuil Hall.

"We meet in this hall, sacred to liberty," he said, "passing a mass meeting of Sentinels of the Republic, to take notice of our threatened institutions and our threatened civilization, to send an alarm to our fellow citizens and invite their co-operation in preserving a republican form of government."

Col. McCormick asserted: "Not the elevation of the lowly, but the tearing down of the well-to-do, has been the alibi behind political manipulation of late. The plea has been made to the farmer against industry. Immigrants from continental Europe are led to direct their old-world hostility to social superiors against Americans. Foreign agitators have repaid us for asylum, by agitation against our Government until today their policies, not those of the great Virginia and Massachusetts philosophers and of the great economist, Hamilton, dominate action in Washington."

History of "Wealth Sharing."
He cited historical share-the-wealth undertakings and said: "Look through history and you will find these teachings have always led to pillage, murder, horror, and universal suffering. These are the inevitable consequences of mass robbery as preached by Marx and his American followers."

"How shall we divide the wealth that Henry Ford has made, among all of us, who have none of it? Shall we take apart the edifice he has built and give a piece to each—the furnace, forges, factories? The cost of wrecking would be far greater than the spoil. Would not the simpler way be for us to confiscate the Ford business and operate it as the postoffice is operated, for the benefit of all; to let Congress legislate the number and design of cars and the administration appoint a manager?"

Col. McCormick presumed the manager would be "Jim Farley," who "does not know anything about automobiles just as he does not know anything about conducting the postoffice." The net result, he added, would be "another of Mr. Farley's deficits," and, if generally applied, would bring "universal ruin."

"Tax Confiscations."
"Shall we therefore expropriate the tax confiscations which are now carrying on?" the speaker inquired. "Shall we increase the rates of income and estate taxes to 70 per cent, make assurance doubly sure that the owner of every useful industry shall not save enough in his lifetime to pay his estate tax? Then, perforce, the Government will have to take all the revenue-producing properties in forfeiture for taxes, which cannot be paid and administer them with reckless, incompetent and conscienceless politicians. There will be no profits, no wealth, no taxes; universal starvation and misery such as exists in Russia. Such is the inevitable outcome of the policies of the extremists in Washington. Such is the result of every dictatorship.

"For two years the courts have been under constant coercion. Statutes have been written by young men in executive departments inflamed with the policies of Moscow, and sent for enactment, not only to Congress, but to the state governments, which are being reduced to the status of provinces. And it has been boldly proclaimed that the executive now stands above the legislative and judicial branches of government.

"There can no longer be doubt in the minds of thoughtful men that ambitions are cherished antagonistic to our Constitution and fatal to our freedom."

FLANDIN HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Wife Also Injured in Collision; Car Speeding, Witnesses Say.
AUXERRE, France, May 4.—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France and Madame Flandin were severely injured near here today when his automobile collided with another car.

Flandin suffered a broken arm and nervous shock but the doctor at the hospital where he was taken said no complications were apparent. Madame Flandin was injured on the head and legs and fainted. When she recovered consciousness she complained of pain in the side. The Premier was en route to his home at D'Arcy Sur Cure to vote in tomorrow's municipal elections. Eye witnesses said his car was speeding and estimated he was going 80 miles an hour.

SHAW'S GARDEN STILL SHOWS ITS EASTER EXHIBITION

Later Blooming Varieties Replace Flowers Used in Original Display.
Many of the flowers in the Easter exhibition at Shaw's Garden have been replaced with later-blooming varieties and the display is being maintained in the same general design.

White chinkinchees, the South African lily, have been replaced with yellow, grown from seed sent from its native land and planted 18 months ago. It is the first time the yellow variety has been shown here.

Regal lilies from China, one of the discoveries of Ernest Wilson, plant hunter, have been substituted for Easter lilies.

Other additions are marguerites, campanulas, calceolarias and Martha Washington geraniums.

200 DOGS IN SHOW AT VILLA DUCHESNE

Exhibition Held on School's Grounds in County; Entries Shiver in Cold.

Dogs of every size and shape, about 200 of them, participated yesterday in the second annual dog show held by pupils of Villa Duchesne on the school grounds at Conway and Spode roads, St. Louis County.

From afar, the barking of the contestants sounded from the grove surrounding the school inspiring neighborhood dogs of too low degree to enter the show to bark sonorous retorts.

Thin coated dogs shivered in the unseasonable cold, dogs with thick coats gazed tranquilly from their blankets, some bearing their initials. Handlers, trim in white coats, moved through the grove contributing to an animated scene.

Show Not Official.
Although the show was not officially recognized by the American Kennel Club many of the finest dogs in this area were exhibited. Unlike the conventional bench show, the outdoor setting afforded ample room and the dogs appeared to relish the opportunity to be exhibited in the open.

Miss Abigail Gross, a student at the school, was in charge of the show and ran it off with a smoothness comparable to professional directors. Black habited nuns moved through the crowd, some of them aiding in posting the results of the contests on a blackboard hard by the judging ring.

A special exhibition was put on by the German Shepherd Club of St. Louis. An unusual event was a popularity contest, spectators voting for their favorite dog.

The title of best dog in the show was won by the Russian wolfhound, Tanya Of Fergovia, owned by Mrs. Villa Smith, shown by Miss Jane Miller.

The most popular dog, selected by popular ballot, was a cocker spaniel, owned by Dr. P. H. Gregory.

Best terrier: Champion Pennyhill Pennant O'Say-Paw, a Welsh terrier, owned by S. I. Pautler.

INDICTMENT RETURNED IN ROBLES KIDNAPING

Oscar H. Robson Accused of Mailing Threatening Letters in Abduction of Child.

By the Associated Press.
TUCSON, Ariz., May 4.—Oscar H. Robson, long held suspect, was indicted by the Federal grand jury here today in the kidnaping of June Robles.

The former night club operator was charged with mailing threatening communications with intent to extort in connection with the kidnaping of the girl more than a year ago.

The indictment against Robson was the only one returned as the grand jurors completed an extended investigation into the abduction.

The indictment was the result of a year's effort on the part of the Department of Justice to solve the kidnaping of the 6-year-old child who was imprisoned for 19 days in a corrugated iron cage in the desert near Tucson.

At the request of Government attorneys, Federal Judge James authorized the grand jury to continue its investigation. Without the special authority the grand jury's business would have expired Monday. The action was taken to mean that the Government's case has not been completed.

Maximum penalty to conviction under the indictment against Robson is 20 years' imprisonment and a $5000 fine. The nature of the indictment bore out the statement of the Robles family that no ransom ever was paid, officials said.

Robson has been at liberty on $5000 bond since the grand jury passed his case in January, but it was expected he would be taken into custody again immediately and required to make a new bond. After being arrested in Phoenix last Nov. 8, Robson spent almost three months in jail while his bond was seat alternated, at $50,000 and $100,000. Efforts of his attorneys to have the amount reduced were futile until the grand jury, after investigating the case at length in January, recessed without taking action.

THEODORE H. PRICE, 'COTTON KING' IN 1900, DIES AT 74

When He Failed for $15,000,000 He Paid Off $13,000,000 at Once and Balance Later.
NEW YORK, May 4.—Theodore H. Price, 74 years old, whose exploits in the cotton market earned him the title "Cotton King" at the turn of the century, died today of pneumonia at his Park avenue home. He had been an invalid for eight years.

In 1910 Price turned from the cotton brokerage business to become editor and publisher of the business weekly, "Commerce and Finance." He was active in the management of the weekly until a few months ago.

Price was nicknamed "Cotton King" in 1900, when the cotton brokerage firm, Price, McCormick & Co., which he headed, failed for $15,000,000. He paid off $13,000,000 immediately, and, despite a court order absolving him from the remaining debt, paid the rest within two years.

He is survived by his widow, Harriet Dyer Price; a son, Theodore H. Jr.; two daughters, Mrs. Archie McMartin Richards and Mrs. Howard Phipps, all of New York.

CONGRESSMAN EXPLAINS PLAN FOR AIR BASE NEAR CANADA

Plumley Says It Will Be Transcontinental Stop; Scoffs at Flurry Over Project.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 4.—The recent international flurry over a proposal to establish an American air base near the Great Lakes was described today by Representative Plumley (Rep.), Vermont, student of military affairs, as "much ado about nothing."

"We were just trying to do something that Canada already has done," said Plumley, member of the House Military Affairs Committee which was reprimanded by President Roosevelt for making public the testimony of an army officer about the proposed air base.

"Canada already has six air bases near the American border," Plumley said. "We have never said anything about them because we looked upon Canada as an ally."

The Great Lakes base was not intended for use against Canada but as an intermediate American transcontinental stop, he said.

THUS SPAKE ZARATHUSTRA

SUCH is the range of Richard Strauss' "Thus Spake Zarathustra"—and such is its sweep of dynamics—that no method of recording has heretofore been able to capture it all.

That you can hear it now on your phonograph, without loss of a single tonal effect, is a triumph of the new Victor Higher Fidelity process of reproduction.

As one critical listener says of this new release: "I am sure that this album must usher in a new era of recording. It has such tremendous earth-shaking power with no sacrifice of tone quality, that at last we have something to make us cry aloud from the rooftops."

This magnificent tone poem is famous as a special feature of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's current repertoire. When the recording was made, a portion of it was broadcast over a national radio hook-up.

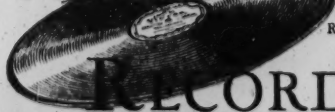

Those of you who heard this broadcast, fine as it was, will be struck by the superiority of the recording over the very same performance as it came over the air. You can hear it at your Victor dealer's today.

Many St. Louisans Brave Rain to Watch the Derby

Eleanor Busch, Miss Jacqueline Busch Jones, Miss Jane Switzer, Miss Martha Nicolaus, Willis Hadley, Lee Niedringhaus and Edward Engler. Mr. and Mrs. Maloy chaptered Miss Kate Davis Pulitzer, Miss Roberts Pierce, Miss Gladys McRee, Miss Betty West, Thomas McPheeters, Arthur B. Shepley, William Tupper, Albert Blanke and Joseph Drew.

In the Haldeman box, which has been occupied by members of the same family for more than 50 years, Mr. and Mrs. Wendling and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Leib were greeted by hundreds of friends. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Wendling's daughter, Miss Peggy, Miss Betty Cault and Henry M. Meier, who left St. Louis early this morning to join William Joy of Detroit for the Derby parties.

Other Occupants of Boxes.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Langenberg, their daughter, Miss Bonnie and her cousin, Harry Langenberg

Jr., arrived several days ago to visit Mrs. Langenberg's mother, Mrs. Lewis C. Hamilton, and were her guests today. Festivities for them will continue into next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingram F. Boyd headed a family party made up of their sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Trustin B. Boyd, who had a box in the first tier. Mr. and Mrs. Claude T. Porter are visiting Mr. Porter's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Boone Porter and Mr. and Mrs. Boone Porter and were with them at the races. One group from St. Louis was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon and Mr. and Mrs. Maury Hill. Another, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Priest and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neal, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Merle E. Robertson on the Newburg road where a cocktail party was given for them last night and a luncheon at the Penderis Club before the races today. Mrs. Priest, the former Miss Francis Bull, is on her way back to St. Louis with her husband from a honeymoon trip to New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Spink were in the Frank W. Bradsby box and nearby sat another St. Louis party, the guests of Mrs. Herman A. Uhl. In the group were: Mr. and Mrs. Aaron T. Ferris, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Schramm, Tom Harkins and G. E. Smith of New Haven, Conn., a former St. Louisan.

C. Drummond Jones, Percy Orthwein and Eugene B. Stinde were with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Flanagan of New York, brother-in-law and sister of Edward Magnus of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Book of Detroit.

Governor and Mayor Attend.

Gov. Park, Mayor Dickmann and parties of men friends, including the Mayor's brother Otto, were here for the day.

St. Louisans renewed old friendships with Mr. and Mrs. C. Bruce Head, who returned to Kentucky to live, a short time ago. Their box on the second tier near those of the Whitney and Widener families from the East held a party including Mr. Head's sister, Mrs. S. P. Gresham and Lyman T. Hay of St. Louis.

Fannie Hurst, St. Louis-born novelist, here gathering material for a new book, had breakfast at the Jockey Club with Platt Okie and Barclay Morrison of St. Louis and W. W. Hawkins of New York. At a nearby table sat Postmaster-General and Mrs. James A. Farley and Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan of Detroit, whose Cavalcade was the Derby winner in 1934 and whose Psychic Bid failed to show today. Congressman Hamilton Fish was another notable present and at least half a dozen Governors of states were present.

Wheeler and Woolsey, movie actors, flew to St. Louis, the former home of Robert Woolsey, and came to Louisville by train.

Entertaining is at its height. One native of Louisville who now lives in St. Louis said she had never known of so many well-arranged parties, replacing the casual informality of previous years. In addition to the clubs, the Louisville Country and the River Valley and the Penderis, which has finally relinquished its almost century-old quarters for a new building, the hotels arranged special parties. At the Brown, for instance, three bands kept the guests entertained.

Junior League Ball.

The Langenberg family and their guests attended the Junior League ball Thursday night, following a box party at the Hotel Show, part of the Derby festival. They attended a buffet supper given for Mr. and Mrs. Langenberg last night by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Caperton, a cocktail party by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Menefee, and tomorrow will be the luncheon guests of Mrs. Langenberg's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Sevier Bonnie and Robert Bonnie, who for many years gave a Derby breakfast.

Miss Katherine Abbott, who has visited in St. Louis frequently and was maid of honor at the wedding of her cousin, Isabel Kirkpatrick, and Francis Disbrow, a few years ago, is entertaining St. Louis guests at her home on Everett avenue. Her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Kirkpatrick of Elizabeth, N. J., formerly of St. Louis, who have been with Mrs. Disbrow in St. Louis, and Curry Kirkpatrick, drove down Friday for a cocktail party at the Abbott home, and will attend the Country Club dinner dance tonight. Tomorrow the entire party will be Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon's guests for breakfast.

Almost invariably at Derby time the John T. Malone house on Willow avenue houses St. Louisans. This year Miss Katherine Malone is entertaining Miss Emily Isaacs, Cleveland friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vilas and Archie Maxwell, will entertain Miss Malone and Miss Isaacs at a buffet luncheon for 80 guests at noon tomorrow at the Louisville Country Club, and accompany them to the same club for dinner. At the races Miss Isaacs sat in the box of Miss Malone's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. O'Brien.

At the Brown Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Frank X. Gorley, and Louisville friends including Mr. and Mrs. George Gould and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Miller, with whom they will spend tomorrow in French Lick Springs, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Friess and Miss Page Wright arrived this morning for the races and will return tomorrow to give a tea for Elda Vettori, an old friend of the Friess family.

Private Car Party.
One private car brought Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Smith and a party including Mr. and Mrs. John C. Heman, Mrs. Rose Shelton, Mrs. Gertrude Osburn, Miss Jean Wehmeyer and Frank Benz. Charles C. Schaper, who has attended the race for several years, entertained another group on his car.

GUARDIANS' BOARD URGES INCREASE IN CHILDREN'S FUND

Unless $63,300 Is Added to Budget, Aldermen Are Told.

IN PENDING BILL

$11,500 for Prospective
New Wards and $35,000
for Widows' Allowances
Also Sought.

It will be necessary for the Board of Children's Guardians to drop from its rolls 405 of the 1873 children under its control and support in foster homes, if the board's budget is not increased by $67,300, the Aldermanic Ways and Means Committee was told yesterday by representatives of the board.

In addition, it was pointed out to the committee, $11,500 should be provided for prospective new wards of the board and $35,000 for new cases of widows with children receiving allowances from the board. The total increase sought by the board was $113,800.

The pending budget bill provides $331,000 for this department, compared with $491,015 requested by the board for the new fiscal year and expenditures of $311,310 in the fiscal year recently ended.

Decision on Requests Deferred.
The Ways and Means Committee, completing its first week of hearings on the $29,359,650 municipal budget for the new year, took the requests of the Board of Children's Guardians under advisement without comment. Neither the committee nor the Board of Aldermen may increase items of the budget, that authority being vested in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. However, the Aldermen may request the Board of Estimate to make increases or may hold up the whole bill in an effort to force changes.

James E. King, chairman of the Board of Children's Guardians; Walter S. Haeussler, a member, and John K. Rowland, agent or executive of the board, appeared before the committee. They said they wanted to make the prospect for the children clear. Haeussler declared that if the appropriation was not increased 230 children would have to be dropped during May and 175 more during June. He thought the board might get along without the additional money desired for widows.

"We wanted the Board of Estimate and Board of Aldermen to understand," he said, "what we're up against. You gentlemen will get complaints about children not being cared for, and deserving widows, who may have been on the waiting list for two years, may apply to you for allowances from the board, but we won't have the money."

Old Allowance Rate Restored.
He added that in recent years the allowance to a foster home for caring for a child had been reduced from $15 a month to $12.50, but that the board had been forced to restore the $15 rate, as the foster parents insisted they could not afford to keep the children for less, because of rising living costs. Similar payments in most cities run from $25 to $30 a month, he related.

Chairman King said the maximum allowance for a widow was $15 a month for each child. He suggested the appropriations for other city departments, which had not been trimmed as far below the amounts requested, might be reduced further to provide funds for the board. Deputy Comptroller Cunningham replied that appropriations for all departments had been cut.

James E. Darst, manager of Municipal Auditorium, appeared before the aldermanic committee in executive session for a second time. The committee has been holding up the auditorium budget.

Tomorrow the committee will hear Director of Public Utilities Wall, Water Commissioner Daily and director of Streets and Sewers McDewitt, whose budgets also have not been approved.

While the hearings have gone on, the Board of Aldermen has been going through the form of holding daily sessions, as required by the Charter, but has had little business before it.

THREE ESCAPED CONVICTS ON WAY BACK TO DALLAS, TEX.

Men Jailed in East St. Louis Are Suspected of Robberies on Recent Journey North.

Three fugitives held at East St. Louis jail since Thursday were turned over yesterday to Sheriff Smoot Schmid, who started back to Dallas, Tex., where they escaped from jail April 14.

The prisoners, Tommy Bryant, Olin Tyler and John P. Bratcher, are suspected of various robberies in Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri, committed since their escape by sawing cell bars and sliding to the ground on ropes made from bed sheets.

Bryant is under 25-year sentence for robbery; Tyler is under 15-year sentence for murder, and Bratcher was held pending trial for robbery. A search of the automobile in which they were riding at the time of the arrest by East St. Louis police, disclosed a quantity of firearms, ammunition, narcotics and automobile licenses of several states.

MRS. CLARA GRANT RAY

SHORTAGE OF $1829 IN ESTATE OF $3892

Two Women Whose Names Are on Surety Bond Say They Didn't Sign It.

Testimony at a hearing Friday in Probate Court at Clayton disclosed a shortage of $1829 in the estate of the late Henry B. LeFort of Kirkwood, which was left to three minor children, for whom the late Philip R. Rabenau, Kirkwood Justice of the Peace who was murdered in his office last December by a determined Negro, was guardian.

The balance in the estate, as reported by Rabenau's widow, who took over his affairs, was reported at $2063.70, consisting of a real estate mortgage of $2000 and $63.70 in bank. According to the record there should be a balance of $3892.

Mrs. Jeanette LeFort, mother of the children, who was appointed guardian after Rabenau's death, sought judgment for the shortage against the signers of Rabenau's $10,000 surety bond. The names of John Rott and his wife, Katie, and William L. Hoeman and his wife, Ida, all of Kirkwood, appear on the bond.

Mrs. Hoeman and Mrs. Rott testified they did not sign the bond. Hoeman said he signed it. Rott has since died. Two handwriting experts testified the handwriting on the bond was not that of Mrs. Hoeman, and one of them said it was not Mrs. Rott's signature. The other said it resembled her handwriting. Judge Hughes took the case under advisement.

QUARREL LED TO FRIENDSHIP OF MARK TWAIN AND ARTIST

Paul Richards Tells of Incident When Humorist Chided Him for Inaccuracy in Drawing.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, May 4.—A quarrel over an illustration led to a friendship that lasted 30 years between Mark Twain and Paul Richards. Richards at 70 is famous as a cartoonist and he was the artist for the humorist.

Mark Twain, Richards recalled, saw a drawing in a publication and discovered the engraving was not skillfully enough done to suit his taste. The reproduction showed a white strip around the neck of the figure. Twain wrote Richards, whom he did not know then, saying: "You had better read my books before you illustrate them. The girl was poisoned, not beheaded." There was further correspondence and the two men became firm friends.

Richards, who is an American citizen, likes to recall the days when he criss-crossed the American continent illustrating events like the Sullivan-Corbett fight, the Jeffries-Johnson bout, the McKinley presidential election—for which he received $1000 a day. He once traveled with a large circus, accompanied Mark Twain to London, drew illustrations of the Boer War, and then settled in Germany. Inflation wiped out a fortune he had accumulated.

300 IN PAGEANT IN HONOR OF ARCHBISHOP GLENNON

Portrayal of Prelate's Activities to Be Given Next Sunday at Auditorium.

A pageant in honor of Archbishop Glennon's Golden Jubilee Year, portraying the activities of the archbishop since his ordination, will be presented at the annual meeting of Catholic Charities of St. Louis in the Municipal Auditorium Opera House at 2:30 p. m. next Sunday.

Three hundred children from 14 of the parishes of the city will participate in the pageant. A copy of the archbishop's study has been constructed as a stage setting. Final dress rehearsals will be held this week. Harry R. McClain is directing the production, Miss Dolly Steinlage the dances, and the Rev. Sylvester L. Tucker has arranged the musical accompaniment. The archbishop will speak at the conclusion of the pageant.

DROP IN RELIEF ROLLS IN ST. CLAIR COUNTY

April Report Shows Decrease of 565 Families Since Peak in January.

Relief expenditures and the number of families receiving aid in St. Clair County, Illinois, continued to decrease during April, according to a report yesterday by Fred C. Austin, County Relief Administrator. The total number of families on the active relief rolls in April was 10,335, a reduction of 35 families under March, and 565 since January, when the rolls reached a peak. The April figure represented 34,208 individuals, or approximately 21 per cent of the county's population.

The number of families added to the relief rolls last month was 353, while 445 were removed. The month closed with 10,224 families receiving aid. Relief stations in East St. Louis and Belleville were closed May 1 due to failure of the Illinois Legislature to appropriate State funds to supplement Federal allocations.

Expenditures for April totaled $296,859, a reduction of $36,197 under the previous month and $70,441 since December, when costs reached a peak. Direct relief costs were $223,859, and for work relief, employing 1500 persons, $38,397 was spent. Administrative costs, including salaries of 249 workers, were $25,370.

DETROIT AUTO PLANTS BUSY; DEPOSITS RISE, RELIEF DROPS

Employment Index at 110 but 58,000 Families Still Are Destitute.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Mich., May 4.—Business gains traced to expanding automobile production are illustrated by Detroit Clearing House figures and relief charts.

Commercial deposits in banks now exceed by $100,000,000 those at the time of the Michigan banking holiday in February, 1933.

The case load of the welfare agencies has dropped 40 per cent since Dec. 5, 1934, as thousands of men were called back to work.

F. James Bear, treasurer of the clearing house, said that the total deposits, $227,000,000, equaled the total early in 1933. John F. Ballenger, relief administrator, said his employment index stood at 110 today, the 1923-25 average being used as 100. Two years ago 212 families were being added to the relief lists daily. In April this year 75 families were removed from the lists daily as they became self supporting.

"There are still more than 35,000 families on relief," Ballenger said, "but two years ago there were 51,464. Only five months ago we reached the peak with more than 53,000 families on our lists."

'BLOND TIGER' CHARGED WITH USE OF MAIL TO DEFRAUD

Andrew Czerwenec Says He Writes Letters to Lonely Czechoslovakian Girls.

By the Associated Press.
Andrew Czerwenec, 32-year-old Czechoslovakian, 818 North Eighth street, was arrested by police yesterday and turned over to Post-office Inspectors who will apply for a warrant charging use of the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Czerwenec admitted he advertised "Parisian Nights" and "Art study photographs" in a number of magazines. He deducted a commission from each order he received and turned the order over to another man to fill, he said. Lately he has received complaints that the orders have not been filled.

The prisoner said he knew the other man as "Mr. Mason," but did not know his address. He explained to officers at Police Headquarters that for recreation he writes letters to lonely Czechoslovakian girls, signing himself, "The Blond Tiger."

Married 50 Years.
Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hampe, 4073 Alma avenue, will observe their golden wedding anniversary Wednesday. Both were born in St. Louis. He is 75 years old and retired as a bookbinder 15 years ago. She is 72. They have three sons, Otto Jr., Eugene, Oliver, and one daughter, Mrs. Laura Cramer, all living here.

JEWISH EXPERT CALLS 'PROTOCOLS OF ZION' FALSE

of Swiss Nazis Who Are Accused of Slandering Race.

By the Associated Press.
BERNE, Switzerland, May 4.—M. Baumgarten, prosecution expert in the Jewish effort to convict Swiss Nazis of slandering the Jewish race in connection with the so-called "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," today branded the protocols as "false."

"These alleged 'protocols' set forth a policy by which the Jews purpose to dominate the governments of the world."

The witness began his reply to four days of effort on the part of the Nazi expert, Ulrich Fleischauer to prove that the documents were genuine and expressed Jewish world policy.

"The question to solve is whether there exists an occult Jewish government seeking world domination," declared Baumgarten. "I must answer by a categorical no. This people of high ideals who gave Jesus to the world cannot be the wicked people described in the Fritsch commentaries. Today, as during the Middle Ages, efforts are made to find the guilty person for all unfavorable events that happen."

Baumgarten reproached Fleischauer for being "blinded by passion" into believing only the unfavorable things said about Jews. He insisted that before the war Russian secret police were involved in "falsification of the protocols."

He declared that Fleischauer had described the Jews as "animals," and asked if it were not German philosophy to consider non-Nordic people as degenerate and inferior. Concluding his testimony, Baumgarten said: "No matter how many citations may be presented, they cannot prove the authenticity of the protocols."

HOPKINS ASSAILS SELFISH MINORITY OF BUSINESS MEN

Relief Head, Speaking at Charity Luncheon, Says
They Oppose Fight for Social Security.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, denounced today what he called "a few men representing a small minority of the business interests of the nation," who, "if they had their way would bring down even their own selfish world around their heads."

The men of whom he spoke, he told a luncheon of the Catholic charities at Hotel Commodore, "regard any determined effort to give economic democracy to a political democracy as activity dangerous and subversive to American tradition."

"Make no mistake about it," he said, "the same forces that so bitterly opposed Al Smith in his battles in behalf of the poor and the unfortunate in New York State, have now marshaled their conventions, their typewriters, and their specious arguments under the dome of the nation's Capitol."

He named as a force opposing a fight for social security "the willfully predatory persons who wish to seize and to hold more than any one man should hold."

"When men and women no longer feel apologetic for being on the side of the oppressed, but make social outcasts of the oppressors," he said, "then with the same scientific genius which has distinguished American industrial engineering, we shall build an economic society within the ample framework of our political democracy by which men's livelihoods will be theirs without question . . . all men shall live their lives rather than fear it."

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, as chairman of the opening session, maintained private charities are essential, that if the Government took them over constitutional debt limits would fall.

"Do you want to give for the love of God," Smith asked, "or do you want to take a dose of laughing gas and let the tax collector extract it from you while you ain't looking?"

Emphasizing the danger to tax and borrowing restrictions, Smith explained that charity must not be confused with home and work relief. "They are entirely different things," he said.

Cardinal Hayes speaks. Patrick Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York, said he believed that Government and private charitable agencies were united for "a common purpose and for a common good."

"All of us," he said, "are engaged as a nation in a crusade for social betterment, for social security, for an economic system that never again will permit the awful catastrophe and calamity that has come upon us in these days of depression."

"The security program of our beloved President is, I am confident, taking into consideration the preservation and conservation of those principles of action so vital to man's liberty and man's happiness here on earth. . . ."

EX-CONVICT FOUND GUILTY

Jury Recommends Mercy: Co-Defendant Testifies Plot Was Designed to Obtain Job.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 4.—Hubert Lindsey, 34 years old, six-term former convict, was convicted tonight of first degree murder for deliberately wrecking a passenger train, causing three deaths.

The jury of six women and six men recommended mercy, making a life sentence in Ohio penitentiary mandatory.

"Well, I beat the rap again," said Lindsey after the verdict was read. D. B. Utrey, defense attorney, announced the would seek a rehearing. Judge Cecil J. Randall deferred sentence until he acts on the motion, which will be heard next week. Lindsey was the first of three to be tried on the charge for the deaths of three railroad men. He was brought to trial under a seldom used Ohio statute.

Victor Tomlinson, 36 testified that Lindsey, his step-father-in-law, plotted the wreck to make it possible for Tomlinson to be reinstated to his job as track foreman. Hugh Brockman, 34, is the third man charged in the case. Besides the three railroad men killed 16 persons were injured.

Foundry Strike Investigator Gets 30 Days in Workhouse; Admits Only One Charge.

Charles M. Lowe Jr., an investigator, was sentenced to 30 days in the Workhouse for speeding and careless driving by Police Judge Simpson yesterday. He appealed.

He was arrested Feb. 11, 13 and 14. He testified, he was hired as an investigator at the Commercial Foundry, 7821 Alabama avenue, where a strike of molders is in progress. To a charge of driving 40 miles an hour on Virginia avenue last Feb. 14, he pleaded guilty and, subsequently, was fined $10 and costs.

However, he denied having driven 60 miles an hour on South Broadway on the first date, and also denied several careless driving charges of failure to make traffic stops and of forcing a passenger bus aside on Virginia avenue on Feb. 13.

Eight peace disturbance charges against him were dismissed for want of prosecution. He said he lived at 3607 Marcus avenue.

STARLING, NOT CROW, BLAMED BY BIRD CLUB

Pugnacious Alien From Europe
Said to Be One That Should Be Trapped.

An indictment against crows as destroyers of game and song birds in the parks and elsewhere, which was voiced by city officials at a meeting Thursday, should have been returned against the starling, according to members of the St. Louis Bird Club and the Webster Groves Nature Study Society.

They said that the starling, a comparative newcomer from Europe that sometimes is mistaken for a young crow, should be blamed for most of the depredations on other winged life.

Albert Bond Lambert denounced the crows at a meeting of the Municipal Airport Commission Thursday. He described a crow trap built by Mahlon B. Wallace Jr. along lines recommended by the Department of Agriculture. Park Commissioner Miller agreed to borrow the trap and set it up in Forest Park.

The bird and nature club members, questioning the need or desirability of reducing the crow population, expressed doubt that the trapping plan would work satisfactorily anyway. Some ornithologists here said they had heard of the trap working with a small degree of success. It was pointed out that the crow was smart enough to notice a man armed with a gun and probably was sufficiently smart to stay out of the trap, particularly if he saw some fellow member of his tribe caught.

It was the opinion of the club members that, if song and game birds had any natural enemy besides the cat, that enemy was the starling.

The starling is only half the size of the crow but has the general characteristics of the latter, including the somber black coat. The appearance is more deceptive when the starling is observed in flocks. This bird was introduced in the United States from Europe in 1890 and moved westward, reaching St. Louis in 1928. It is hardy and muscular, with a powerful bill and a belligerent disposition. It is in the habit of driving other birds from choice nesting places. In the last month bird club members have observed several instances of this mean trick, and on one occasion, at Shaw's Garden, they saw two starlings drive a crow from a feeding spot.

They have not observed crows attacking other birds, but it is generally known that the crow eats the eggs and the young of game and song birds. On the other hand, the crow devours such pests as grasshoppers, cutworms, caterpillars, mice and, something especially to his credit, the Japanese beetle.

BREMER CASE FUGITIVE CAUGHT IN MISSISSIPPI

Harry Sawyer Thirteenth to Be Captured of 22 Indicted in Kidnaping of St.
Paul Banker.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 4.—Harry Sawyer, indicted to be captured of the 22 indicted in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, was arrested last night near Pass Christian, Miss. Sawyer, accused of being the "finger man," the one who pointed out Bremer to his abductors—will be returned here for trial.

Ten of those previously arrested are now on trial here. Another, Byron Bolton of Chicago, who pleaded guilty as the trial opened, is to take the stand Monday as the Government's principal witness.

Among those still sought by the Government in the $200,000 ransom case are Alvin Karpis, named with Arthur (Doc) Barker, now on trial, as co-leader in the kidnaping, and Harry Campbell, also regarded as one of the most dangerous fugitive criminals. They shot their way out of a trap several weeks ago in Atlantic City, N. J.

Sawyer, born at Lincoln, Neb., became an Omaha (Neb.) liquor runner and later a St. Paul night club operator. He was questioned by police shortly after Bremer's release Feb. 7, 1934, but was freed when they were unable to connect him with the case. He disappeared a few months later after several persons named in indictments had been arrested.

Copies of the warrant for Sawyer and of the indictment were sent to New Orleans today.

Fugitive Attracted Attention by Lavish Spending.

NEW ORLEANS, May 4.—"Omaha Harry" Sawyer, who Federal agents say was the "finger man" in the Bremer kidnaping, is held here pending arrival of a copy of the St. Paul indictment against him.

He said he was ready to go to St. Paul without delay.

Sawyer, known also as "Sea King," "Harry Sandovitch," and "Harry J. Porche," was assigned before a Federal Commissioner today. Bond was fixed at $100,000. He was brought here immediately following his arrest last night near Pass Christian, Miss., by Department of Justice agents. His wife, Dolly, accompanied him voluntarily. There is no charge against her.

Information given Department of Justice agents by two Harrison County, Mississippi, peace officers at the arrest. The officers said Sawyer had appeared on the Mississippi Gulf Coast last November and established a home for his wife and himself. He attracted attention by lavish spending.

He was sitting in his automobile, parked in front of a Gulf Coast gambling house, when the agents attached. He offered no resistance.

Sawyer was identified by a masked forefinger and through photographs. He weighs 230 pounds.

Department of Justice records show he was arrested at Lincoln in 1935 on a charge of burglary with $100,000. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years and paid $100,000. He was arrested in Minnesota in 1931 and at Omaha and Lincoln in 1920.

HELD IN KIDNAPING

HARRY SAWYER.

JURY IN MCGILL TRIAL EXCUSED UNTIL TOMORROW

Reports It Has Reached No Agreement in Mail Fraud Case After Eight Hours' Deliberation.

The jury trying Alroy U. McGill, once wealthy rice miller of Stuttgart, Ark., on a mail fraud charge, reported to Federal Judge Davis late yesterday afternoon that it was unable to agree after eight and a half hours of deliberation and was excused until tomorrow morning.

The case, which involves the question of whether McGill was sane in 1930 and 1931 when he was alleged to have sent fictitious bills of lading to Boatmen's National Bank, went to the jury Friday afternoon. An officer of the bank testified it lost $138,000 by extending credit to the mill after receiving the bills of lading and also a false financial statement from the company.

Twice yesterday afternoon the jury returned for additional instructions. The first time the Court read again his instructions on insanity. The jurors then wanted to know if they were to decide whether McGill was sane or insane at all times between sending of the first and last of the bills of lading in question. The Court replied they were concerned with his sanity only on the particular days when the bills were sent.

McGill's associates in his firm, the McGill Bros. Rice Mill, had testified that his conduct before the mill went into bankruptcy in 1931 was so peculiar they considered him insane. United States Attorney Blanton argued that insanity should be proved by ability to distinguish between right and wrong rather than by peculiar conduct. The court, in its instructions, so advised the jury.

WORLD COTTON CONGRESS CRITICIZES U. S. METHODS

Decides This Country Must Modify Program or Buyers Will Move Elsewhere.

ROME, May 4.—The world cotton congress decided today the United States will have to modify its cotton program or European buyers will continue to increase their cotton dealing elsewhere.

The decision embodied a series of resolutions expressing general dissatisfaction with the present American cotton raising, marketing and baling methods.

Only by one paragraph, which said the cotton committee would be willing to co-operate with the United States in finding a way out of the latter's difficulties, was the resolution softened.

Spokesmen for the congress admitted they were "much interested" in steps which the American Government has taken in preparing metal markers which will be used to identify each bale and said: "The international federation is prepared to co-operate with the United States Government in any feasible plan for eradicating false packing."

The congress suggested the formation of a special joint committee composed of representatives of the Department of Agriculture and European spinners to work out the problems.

MODEL RAILROAD EXHIBITED HERE BY CHESAPEAKE & OHIO

Miniatures of Well-Known Trains and Buildings; 600 Feet of Track in 80-Foot Display.

What is said to be the largest model railroad in the world is now on display at Famous-Barr. The exhibit is 80 feet long and has 600 feet of track on which miniatures of well-known passenger and freight trains are in constant operation. Models of railway terminals and historical buildings, among them the St. Louis Union Station, the new Cincinnati terminal, Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson; the Capitol, and the Governor's Palace at Williamsburg, Md., are placed in a landscaped setting against a background depicting the history of transportation.

The exhibit comes to St. Louis from the "Century of Progress" in Chicago and is part of the 150th anniversary celebration of the founding of the Chesapeake & Ohio company of the Chesapeake & Ohio.

H. O. Bishop, general advertising agent for the lines, lectures at 2 and 4 p. m., covering 300 years of American history in 30 minutes.

The exhibit, which will remain here for another fortnight, is open to the public.

NEW PLANS PROPOSED TO END AUTO STRIKE

Gives Proposition to Negotiators in Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 4.—Negotiators in the automobile strike returned here today to discuss new compromise proposals after representatives of strikers in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor Co. plant again rejected an armistice plan.

William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors, met with Federal conciliators and American Federation of Labor representatives to discuss a settlement proposal drafted by Charlton Ogburn, counsel for the American Federation of Labor auto workers' unions.

Edward F. McGrady, first assistant secretary of labor; Thomas J. Williams, Federal mediator, and Francis J. Dillon, A. F. of L. organizer, also took part in the conference which they hoped would end strikes and shutdowns in 20 plants which are costing the 33,000 men affected more than $800,000 a week in wages. Dillon denied a report that the A. F. of L. planned to repudiate the Toledo strikers—members of a federation affiliate—for alleged failure to recognize the federation's authority.

Dillon Denies Advising Workers. "I have not advised the Toledo workers to return to work pending negotiations," Dillon said, referring to the armistice offer. "A year ago I advised the same strikers to return to work pending completion of negotiations, and the men followed my advice. The company broke faith, however, and therefore I am not suggesting any return."

Formation of the independent workers' society among the 2300 men without jobs as a result of the Toledo strike and the subsequent shutdown, reopened the disputed question of the actual strength of the A. F. of L. in the auto industry and the authority of the President's Automobile Labor Board.

Independents Seek Recognition. The society seeks to have the plant reopened. Fred Seiger, president, said he would present a petition to the Automobile Labor Board demanding recognition of independents as the collective bargaining agency for the majority of employees of the plant.

The board's offices here said it would consider such a petition. The board has not been asked to mediate in the strike, and has been denounced by the A. F. of L. which charges it with favoring the management.

Plant elections conducted by the board showed less than 9 per cent of the nearly 200,000 workers who participated voting for A. F. of L. representatives.

Group of Toledo Chevrolet Workers Votes to Return to Work.

TOLEDO, O., May 4.—Independently organized employees of the Toledo Chevrolet plant expressed their desire to return to work, in a mass meeting tonight attended by approximately 1600. They approved by a large majority a motion that a secret ballot be held on the proposals advanced by the company in an effort to end the local strike.

The Toledo strike, called by the United Automobile Workers Federal Union, threw 2300 local workers out of their jobs and precipitated shutdowns and strikes affecting approximately 33,000 automotive workers. The local plant makes transmissions.

Tonight's meeting of independent workers was sponsored by the newly formed Independent Workers' Association, which has started circulation of petitions asking the management to reopen the plant. One employee identified with the new association was injured today as he sought signatures to the petitions. It was the first act of violence since the strike started April 23.

A minor strike resulting from the tie-up in General Motors plants in various cities was settled in Cleveland today. At the Murray-Ohio Manufacturing Co., 200 workers had been sent home and approx-mately 100 more had struck. The agreement today will send the workers back to the plant Monday. The agreement, said a Cleveland labor officer, calls for hourly wage increases of five to 12 cents an hour, and observance of seniority rights. The part of the plant devoted to Chevrolet production will remain closed for the time being.

New Airmail Closing Time. The northbound New Orleans to Chicago airmail plane, now arriving at the St. Louis Airport at 2 a. m. and reaching the Chicago Airport at 6 a. m., will have its schedule set back 25 minutes, beginning tomorrow. Consequently, closing time for airmail at the main postoffice, Eighteenth and Walnut streets, will be changed from 1:55 a. m. to 2:30 a. m.

Y. M. C. A. Music Week. The North Side Y. M. C. A. will observe National Music week with programs of community singing, chamber music and selections by the Edelweiss German Band at 7 p. m., tomorrow, Wednesday and Friday. Admission will be free.

White Metal Continues to Hold Center of Financial Stage — Share Average Shade Higher — Sugars Up in Final Session.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 4.—As silver went, so went the Stock Market during the greater part of this week.

The white metal continued to hold the center of the financial stage as it slipped steadily downward from the 81-cent-a-ounce peak established at the end of last week, when the United States Treasury suspended temporarily its active bidding and failed further to advance its price of 77.57 cents for domestic silver.

The world price got down as low as 71 1/2 cents as speculators in international markets cashed in the profits which they had previously accumulated in their "free ride" on the Government's silver-buying program. As the week came to an end, however, there was apparent a disposition again to bid somewhat higher in free markets for the metal.

Silver shares declined along with the price of the commodity, and their slide was generally unsettling to Stock Market sentiment. The result was a generally downward course in equities during most of the week.

The decline was about cancelled, however, in a sharp rally on Friday which affected not only the metals but most other sections of the list, with the exception of rails.

As investors and traders looked over their shoulders at the week just closed they found the market had risen from 38.8 to 40.3 in terms of the Associated Press average.

Total reported stock transactions, including inactives, on the New York Stock Exchange during the week ended May 4 aggregated 1,570,000 shares. Total bond transactions approximated $2,762,000, par value.

Silver Currencies.

In the exchange market, as elsewhere, silver monopolized attention, with the Far Eastern currencies on the slide along with the metal. The leading "free" silver currency, Hongkong dollars, were off nearly 5 cents at one time before improving at the end of the week.

Corporate news was mixed, as were general indices of the pace of trade. Retail business was held to be holding well, but heavy rains began to show signs of the normal seasonal slackening, aggravated by labor troubles affecting some plants of General Motors.

Steel operations dipped to 431 per cent of capacity, compared with 44.6 per cent the previous week, and power production showed a contra-seasonal decline. Car loadings were sharply lower, but the significance of the figures was obscured by the extra rush of shipments of the previous week which had been made to avoid impending freight rate increases.

At the same time, there was a number of favorable earnings reports, and even some extra dividend declarations.

Sugar Sweetens List.

Gains of 1 to 7 points by preferred stocks of sugar companies set a bright example for other issues as stocks coasted along for moderate gain at the week-end session.

Analysts who studied the industrial situation found the trifling decline in automobile output shown by Cram's estimate a reason for cheer. The drop of only 105 cars from the previous week's peak of 110,570 cars was attributed both to seasonal influence and to the labor trouble in one section of the industry.

Another factor in Wall Street calculations was the Senate's support of the amendment to the Vinson bill designed to effect immediate cash payment of bonuses to World War veterans. The move was vented to guess the net effect on the market, it was reported that some withheld commitments pending final solution of the issue.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks the market trading up from 40.4 to 40.3. The trading range on the basis of the short session was somewhat faster than on Friday. Volume totaled 474,490 shares against 953,500 for the preceding session.

Gains in a number of sugar preferreds, brokers said, reflected the recent rise in the staple and improvement in the sugar situation in Cuba. Cuban American sugar, preferred, ran up 9 points to a new high on the year and managed to close with a gain of 7 points. Other preferreds, which were bid up 1 to 5 points, included American Sugar, Great Western and Guantamano.

Preferreds Put on Show.

Preferred issues on other sections of the market put on a good show, several bounding ahead for gains of 1 to 5 points. Once more, this energy was ascribed in Wall Street to the unrelenting search of supply for employment.

Pace-setters among the senior shares were General Railway Signal, with a gain of 5 points; American Smelting preferred, up 4; Federal Light & Traction, up 4; and Reverse Brass, up 3.

With the exception of Allied

TWO-SIDED BOND LIST

NEW YORK, May 4.—The bond market developed into something of a two-sided affair today with corporate issues selling generally higher and U. S. Governments distinctly soft.

Another special movement in low-priced utility bonds was the outstanding feature of the session. Some of these, including two issues of New Orleans Public Service

But some of the better known prime investment loans were backward on circulation of more gossip concerning refunding plans.

Other than announcement that the Treasury would jack the price of the new 2½ per cent bonds which will be exchanged for the called first liberties up 50 cents a hundred on May 7, there was nothing in the day's news to account for the further rise in Government bonds, which have been in supply for two days in succession. It was pointed out, however, that during the current week Treasury loans rushed up in vigorous fashion, the majority

NOTE—St. Bernard, Whopper, McCarthy, Bluebeard, Whiskolo, Morplich, Blackbirder, Weston and Tuticurio were coupled in mutual field.

Mutuals paid: Omaha, $10, place $5, show $3.80; Roman Soldier, place $6.40, show $4.20; Whiskolo, show $3.40.

Omaha, much the best but lucky to escape interference in the early crowding, was taken to outside after first quarter, raced to the lead gradually after reaching final half mile and upon taking command held away easily thereafter, winning with something left. Roman Soldier also enjoyed room in early stages, worked his way to outside after reaching back stretch, responded well when called upon and stood severe pressure firmly in final quarter but could not menace winner. Whiskolo raced to a contending position with a rush, lost ground on far turn and weakened in flat three-sixteenths but held others off. Nellie Flag suffered sharp interference from Eye soon after the start, was again impeded on first turn, lacked room through-out back stretch run, and could not improve position when clear in last five-sixteenths. Blackbirder came from far back and finished boldly. Psychic Bid went well. Morplich also showed good form. Plat Eye caused much interference soon after the start, had speed quit badly after a mile. McCarthy made up ground. Commonwealth was never prominent, failing to respond to pressure. Today was in close quarters in back stretch but failed to respond when clear and weakened in stretch. Boxhorn quit badly. St. Bernard was cut off after reaching back stretch.

By the Associated Press.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 4.—Gallant son of a gallant daddy, William Woodward's Omaha stretched his long legs comfortably today on the cold, rain-drenched surface of the historic Churchill Downs track and galloped to a smashing victory in the sixty-first Kentucky Derby.

While a thoroughly soaked but highly excited crowd of nearly 50,000 spectators roared their acclaim, the big, gangling chestnut colt administered a sound beating to 17 rival three-year-olds, including the crack filly favorite, Nellie Flag, and duplicated the triumph of his famous sire, Gallant Fox, the winner of the 1930 Derby for the New York Jockey Club. Omaha also carried this afternoon. Running with much the same confidence his daddy showed five years ago, Omaha steered clear of the early jam, took command on the back stretch and never was seriously menaced in the long stretch drive despite a game finish of the powerful black colt Roman Soldier, the Texas Derby winner.

Whiskolo Finishes Third.
A length and half separated Omaha and Roman Soldier at the finish with a field horse, Whiskolo, hanging on to take third money. Whiskolo was four lengths behind Roman Soldier, but a length and a half in front of Nellie Flag, the capricious filly which suffered from early interference and barely took fourth money, by a head, from Blackbirder.

The rest of the big field was well scattered, with most of the heavily played choices nowhere. Plat Eye, after setting the pace for a half mile, finished eighth. Commonwealth, supposed to be at home in the somewhat slippery going, was tenth, and Today, C. V. Whitney's erstwhile favorite, finished twelfth after weakening badly in the stretch. Col. E. R. Bradley's Boxhorn, the hope of the "hard-boots" and rated a strong contender, never was in the contention and finished sixteenth, beating only St. Bernard and Weston.

It was a dismal, cheerless day, with a crowd of disappointed spectators shivering in the coldest weather the Derby has experienced in a blue moon, but it was a grand victory for Omaha and the colors of William Woodward's Belair Stud. Saunders Rides Good Race.
On the track where the great Earle Sande rode Gallant Fox to triumph five years ago, "Wee Willie" Saunders of Bozeman, Mont.,

Second choice in the betting at 4 to 1, Omaha paid $10 to win for each $2 ticket in the mutuels, as well as $5 to place and $3.80 to show. The sturdy son of Gallant

Ghnouly Boxes Locatelli At Chicago Friday Night

Joe Ghnouly has been matched to box Cleto Locatelli, champion of Italy, at Chicago, Friday night, he announced in a wire to the Post-Dispatch yesterday. The winner is scheduled to meet the victor in the Lou Ambers-Tony Canzoneri match which is to be held in New York next month.

In Locatelli, Ghnouly will be meeting a boy who, up to this year had 78 fights, winning 66 of them, 18 on knockouts, losing seven and boxing draws in five.

His latest battle was a victory over Lew Massey in Philadelphia. He has dropped two decisions to Tony Canzoneri but has defeated Kid Berg, Eddie Cool, Benny Bass and Frankie Klick.

According to the record, Locatelli is 28 years old, having been born

By J. Roy Stockton.

Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.
BOSTON, May 4.—Stylish Willie Walker, the rhythmic left-hander from East St. Louis, held the Boston Braves to three hits this afternoon, struck out the great Babe Ruth twice and the Cardinals opened their first 1935 invasion of the East with a 3 to 0 shutout victory. It was the undefeated Walker's second triumph of the year and boosted the World Champions above the 400 mark.

Walker was a master pitcher. Benny Cantwell, the Boston pitcher, lined a single to center in the third inning and Coscarart got a triple on his looping fly to right when Johnny Rothrock missed his foolhardy attempt to trap the ball on the first hop. Joe Mowery, who relieved Ruth after the Babe's usual three trips to the plate, hit the other Boston safety, a single to right with one out in the ninth inning. That constituted the attack

U. City Wins Only One Event But Retains Missouri Track Title

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 4.—All but doubling the score of their nearest foe, the University City Indians this afternoon won a fourth straight Class A championship in the thirty-second annual Missouri Inter-scholastic track and field meet here at the University of Missouri. The Indians amassed 29 points to 15 for St. Louis Christian Brothers, which was second, and 13 for Kansas City Central, third.

Clayton, in the Class B division, also staged a successful championship defense. The Claytontes collected 20 points and were trailed by Charleston, second, with 15, and Senath and Washington, tied for third, with a dozen points apiece. A third championship defense, in Class C, fell short of the goal, however. Thayer, 1934 titlist, was beaten out by Elsberry in a close race, 24 to 19.3. Missouri School of the Deaf of Fulton was third with 16.

Despite chill winds, an overcast sky and a track and infield soaked by two days of rain, two State and one class record fell. Most brilliant performance was that of Robert Waldram, Washington (Mo.) weight man, who hurled the javelin 191 feet, 2 1/4 inches, to eclipse the old State criterion of 179 feet, 8 inches, made by Dunkin of Harrisonville in 1931.

Honor of cracking the only other State record went to Frank Rucker, Kirkwood's distance ace. Rucker showed heels to the field in the Class A mile run in the time of 4 minutes, 31.8 seconds, a mark which would do credit to the average college miler. Rucker's performance lowered an old standard for the event of 4 minutes, 37.5 seconds, which belonged to Van Orman of Poplar Bluff, 1934. Downing, Warsaw miler, paced his event in Class C in 4 minutes, 42.2 seconds for a new record in that division, blasting the 4 minute, 46.4 second time of Collins, Willow Springs, 1934.

Some Synthetic Records.
Times in all the hurdles events constituted new records since, for the first time this year, the high hurdles were lowered three inches, and the distance of the low sticks event was cut from 220 to 200.

Outstanding individual point scoring feat was produced by Wilmer Warren, Kansas City Central sprinter. Warren won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes in Class A to collect 10 points, a performance unequalled by any other entrant.

University City's successful title quest was marked by all-around strength and a remarkable lack of any dependence on individual stars. It brought to the Indians their

BROWNS HOPING WEATHER WILL LET THEM PLAY AGAIN SOMETIME

By James M. Gould.

It begins to look as though Forecaster Nunn were a pretty good friend of the Browns. Of course, later events may prove it to be only an apparent friendship, but the fact remains that the good old Forecaster stopped the slump of Rogers Hornsby's team when the Browns themselves were unable to do it. When a club loses eight in a row, through one cause or another, a rest is supposed to be just what the doctor should order. So, grasping the situation with his usual acumen, Mr. Nunn ordained not only one day rest, but four in succession.

Two games scheduled with Detroit were postponed, and now, two with the Yankees have gone by the board for the present. As the Tigers were just beginning to click and the Yanks have been clicking all season, perhaps it's just as well that the forecaster stepped in. Now, only today's game with New York remains of the supposedly-current series and it is not to be expected that the Senators, Athletics and the Red Sox will be quite as tough opposition. Anyway, it is quite within the bounds of possibility that the rest will accomplish wonders with the Browns and that, once the schedule is resumed, the club may go places and do things. Thus far, in 12 games, they haven't gone very far and have seen very little in the way of victories.

George Blaholder has been picked as the Brownie pitcher for several days and is first selection today, though Buck Newsom is beginning to wonder when that string of victories he promised himself is going to start. So, he may go instead of Blaholder. Probably Johnny Allen, who was to have pitched yesterday, will get the hurling assignment from Acting-Manager Art Fletcher of the Manhattan contingent.

The St. Louis cripples—Burns, Hornsby, Clift and Melillo—are sure to be benefited by the long lay-off and, with the exception of Hornsby, all will be in action whenever this long raining winter decides to be over. The Yanks are showing quite a rearrangement from last season. Lazzari is back at second and Rolfe has switched to third with Crosetti at short. In the New York outfield are the veterans Combs and Chapman (out with a charley horse recently) and Selkirk and Hill, youngsters.

Track Meet Postponed.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.
HARRISBURG, Ill., May 4.—Rain caused a postponement of the Big Eleven track meet scheduled to be held here today. The meet will be held in Herrin next Tuesday night, officials announced.

WHITE SOX WIN AGAIN, BEATING SENATORS WITH LATE RALLY, 5-4

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 4.—Rip Radcliffe's third home run of the season with a man on in the seventh inning today gave Chicago a 5 to 4 victory over the Washington Senators and accounted for Pitcher Hadley's first defeat of the campaign.

Hadley, who had won his first three starts, had a 4 to 3 lead when Radcliffe's long blow drove in Bud Hafey ahead of him. Hafey ran for Mule Haas, who batted for Les Tietje and singled. Tietje was credited with his first victory of the year, although Whitlow Wyatt pitched the last two innings.

The triumph kept the White Sox's perfect record at home intact. Washington

Detroit's fourth straight victory and its first test against an Eastern foe, Gerald Walker, Mickey Cochran's hard-hitting outfielder, paced Detroit's 11-hit attack on Wesley Ferrell with two doubles in four trips, driving in two runs and scoring one himself.

Little Joe Sullivan, the rookie left-hander from Hollywood, went the route for Detroit to win his second game in three starts, limiting the Sox to eight scattered blows.

Entire Units of Former Bridge & Beach Plant Occupied With Acquisition of Main Floor.

PARTS STORED IN BUILDING

Site Comprises 8 1-3 Acres and Is Contiguous to Terminal Belt Line in Northwestern Part of City

By Berry Moore

The Chevrolet Motors Corporation has acquired the entire first floor of the three-story Union avenue building, the former Bridge & Beach group, in the northwestern industrial district. It has occupied the second and third floors of this unit for several months. Each floor has approximately 30,340 square feet of available floor space, or a total of 60,680 square feet. The building is a major unit of the group.

The space is used for storage of Chevrolet parts for replacements at the St. Louis territory. Occupancy is under a lease carrying a clause providing for vacation in case of the sale of the property. The lease was arranged by the real estate department of the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

Occupying 8 1-3 acres, the Bridge & Beach group comprises 14 buildings—three major and 11 auxiliary units. It is served by the Terminal belt line, which forms the north boundary of the site.

The General Motors Parts Corporation of Detroit, according to a reliable source, recently sought to purchase this entire group of buildings for a major parts depot, with negotiations reaching the option stage. Negotiations were dropped, however, when the decision was reached that it would be too close to Chicago facilities for a major source of supply. Attention is now focused on Kansas City, with its geographical position as an argument in its favor.

The plant group was built in 1921 by the Bridge & Beach Manufacturing Co., manufacturer of stores, etc., at an estimated cost of $1,300,000, including that of the site, which has a rather high valuation by virtue of its track facilities.

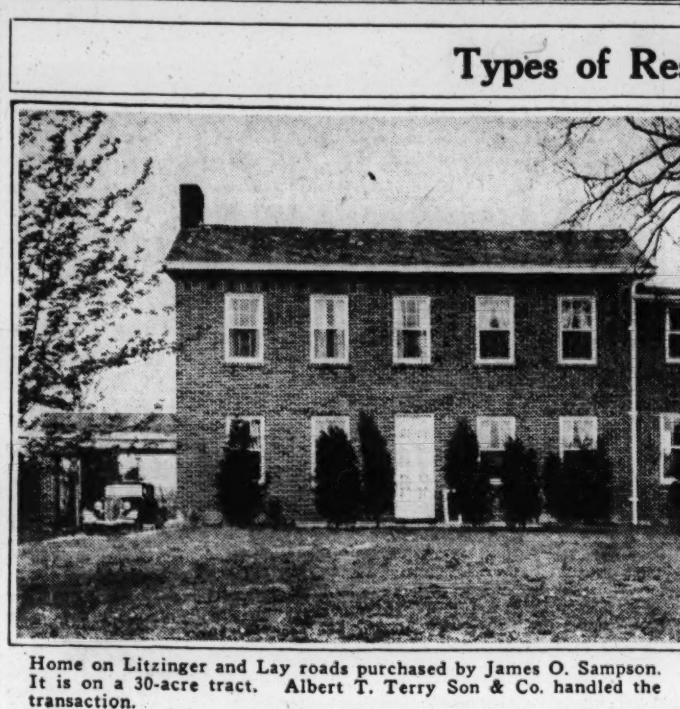

Title Vested Holding Company. The property is now owned by Union boulevard holding corporation, composed of bondholders who acquired it in 1931 under a deed of trust for $600,000, reduced to $481,000, plus accrued interest and taxes.

The Bridge & Beach plant is now owned by the Brown avenue unit of the group. Occupancy under a lease subject to cancellation with the sale of the property. Prior to its sale under the mortgage, the Bridge & Beach plant embraced the entire property.

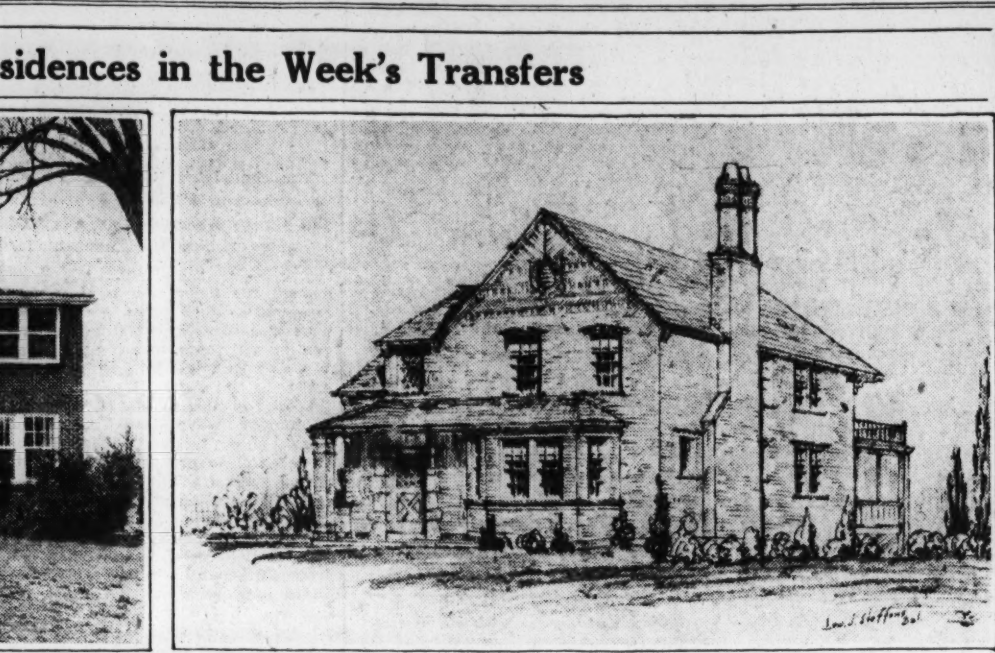

The Board of Equalization has reduced the 1935 assessed valuation of the property from $412,000 to $307,000. This, however, cannot be taken as a criterion of the value of the property. The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Union boulevard corporation is scheduled to be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Major plants in this district include the Neidringhouse Mal Co., United Drug Co., General Motors Corporation, Brodbeck & Bascom Rope Co., Cupples & Envelope Co., Metalcraft Corporation, Maloney Electric Co., Wrought Iron Range Co. and Pullman shops.

CHASE ULMAN PLANS UPTOWN CORNER BUILDING

To Erect Three-Story Business Structure on Site at Maryland and York Avenues.

Conspicuous as the first project of its type to materialize in this part of the city since 1929, plans have been completed for a modern three-story fireproof business structure to be erected at the southwest corner of Maryland and York avenues, with Chase Ulman as the builder.

Attractively designed, the building will occupy a site having a frontage of 160 feet on Maryland, with a depth of 100 feet. The first floor will comprise stores, the second floor shops and the third floor offices. Construction is to be started within the next week.

Approximately 50 per cent of the space in the building has been leased from the architect's drawings, with negotiations now pending, looking to complete absorption within a comparatively short time, it was stated. The Kempland Realty Co., of which George Kempland is president, is the leasing agent.

The site is regarded as one of the most attractive in this part of the city for a building enterprise of this kind. It is situated just east of the towering Park Plaza Hotel, at the southeast corner of Maryland avenue and Kingshighway. It is also in the same city block with the Chase Hotel at Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway, and the Chester and Chase apartments adjoining on Lindell, eight-story structures, built by Ulman in 1921. Ulman formerly owned all the ground in this block, originally part of the W. K. Bixby estate.

Ulman recently completed construction of an ornate two-story building at 4942 Maryland avenue, occupied by Sperber's Hair Shop, which purchased it from the plans. This building is west of and adjoining the site of the new project at Maryland and York.

Ulman is a director of Armour & Co. of Illinois in the reorganization and financial set-up of which he played a prominent part.

RESIDENCE BEING BUILT FOR A. D. BOND

It Will Be in Colonial Style and One of Group in Private Park.

Construction has been started on a large country residence at Mexico, Mo., for Arthur D. Bond, vice-president of the A. P. Green Brick Co. of Mexico. Designed by Study & Farrar, architects, the house is being built in a family park covering several hundred acres in which various members of the Green family have homes.

The Bond house is designed in the Colonial style of architecture, with a fine two-story colonnade running across the southern garden facade. The view of the house from this angle will resemble Mount Vernon, the home of Washington. The north front or main entrance facade, is composed of a main or central pavilion, with connecting links on either side. Many of the historic homes of the Old South were designed along these same lines.

In plan, the house is composed of a wide entrance hall running directly through the central pavilion. Opening off this hall is the dining room, breakfast room, and a central passage which leads to a large living room. Construction will be semi-fireproof. ## REMODELED HOME OPEN WEDNESDAY

Specimen House on Plaza May Be Inspected by Public for 10 Weeks.

The remodeled house set up on the Memorial Plaza at Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, as a visual example of how the householder can improve his property, will be opened for inspection by the general public at 2 p. m. Wednesday with a dedicatory ceremony. The exhibit will remain on the plaza for 10 weeks and will be open day and night.

Work on the exhibit began last September when two one-story, ramshackle frame houses were moved to the plot by the committee in co-operation with the Federal Housing Administration seeking to stimulate activity in the building industry. Architects, who donated their services, designed improvements which have been added to the west structure, leaving evidence that it ever was a duplicate of its neighbor to the east.

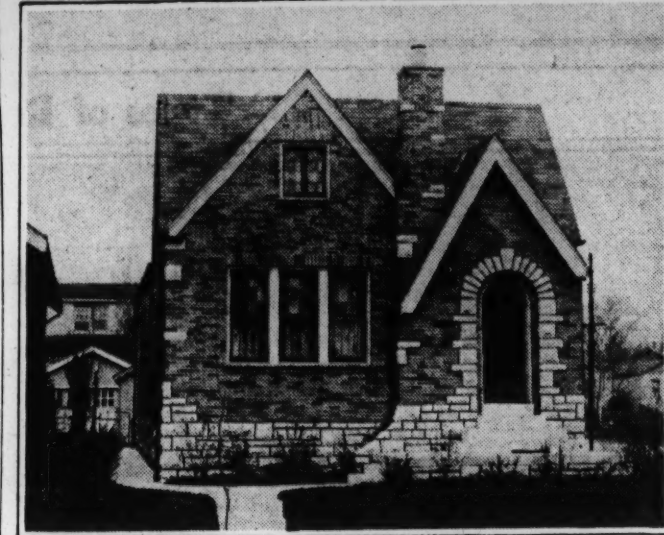

The west structure has a new claspboard covering, two new wings and an addition to the kitchen, which holds a heating plant. Where there were three rooms before, there are now two bedrooms, a living room, dining room, kitchen and bath, in addition to the heating plant.

When the exhibit is opened the new dwelling will be complete, with furniture, draperies, landscaping and a flagpole. All material, furnishings and labor necessary for the work have been donated. The contrast of the two structures will be carried out in the unimproved dwelling with outmoded furnishings that are being put into place.

John Ring Jr., managing director of the exhibit, said that 48,000 pledges for work that will cost $14,182,000 have been received by the committee from home owners in St. Louis and St. Louis County during the campaign. Of this amount, $8,000,000 had already been spent, he said.

Ring said that the extent of the Improvements shown in the exhibit would obviously be unwise economically for owners of dwellings similar to the unimproved structure, but that it was the purpose of the committee to include several possible improvements as to acquaint home owners with the possibilities. This will be explained by representatives of the committee who will be on hand to give estimates of the cost of construction and suggest plans to interested owners.

CIRCUIT CLERK ADOPTS NEW FILING SYSTEM

Records of Cost Bonds and Security Kept Up to the Minute.

A system, which has been in use for 30 years or more in keeping records of cost bonds and security in cases filed in Circuit Court, has been abolished by Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest. Priest, who took office in January, decided that the system, known as the "blind filing method," was not satisfactory. With his chief deputy, Alfred Fleishman, he sought to improve it with a modern "visible filing," which was adopted yesterday.

It was explained that often under blind filing, costs accruing in several cases against certain sureties, firms or individuals reached large amounts before they could be checked and further security called for by the courts. Thus with thousands of cases filed annually and pending lawsuits still awaiting trial the bond clerks, it was stated, were unable to keep up accurately with new cases and old cases at the same time.

The system of bond-checking just adopted was designed to show by a series of visible and movable indicators the progress of costs pending against each security. As cases are disposed of and taxed for costs the indicator is moved toward the maximum amount under which a surety is obtained and as costs are paid the indicator moves back. The danger signal is a red flag, indicating to the bond deputy that further costs must be posted at once before cases bonded by such surety can be docketed for trial.

A statement by Priest set out that the new system was the simplest, yet most accurate, he had found after several months of study. There are more than 1000 different sureties on file in the Circuit Court, with cases in cases varying between $750 and $600, the average being $25. It is expected that the clerk, by the new plan, will be able to make larger collections of costs, such increase indirectly helping the city by lessening the overhead expense of the courts.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY IN RIVER

Man About 55; Initials "J. F." on Watch.

The body of an unidentified man about 55 years old was recovered from the river yesterday at Steins street.

The man was 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed about 170 pounds and had gray hair. He was wearing a blue serge suit, blue and white striped shirt and new black oxford. In his pockets were a gold watch with initials "J. F.", a pipe, an empty purse and a penknife. A belt buckle bore the initials "F." The body was taken to the morgue.

Jane Caradine Wed to William W. Moulton

MISS JANE KATHERINE CARADINE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Caradine, became the bride of William Watkins Moulton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Horace Moulton, 26 Brentmoor Park, yesterday evening in a formal ceremony at St. Peter's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Hubert A. Woolfall read the marriage service at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of a large gathering.

The bride, who came down the long aisle on the arm of her father, wore a filmy gown of white tulle, made over satin. The softness above the Empire waist was worked into a boat neck back and front, finished with triple bands of shirring. Ruffles trimmed the long tight sleeves at the shoulder and dozens of rows of ruffles extended into a peacock train. A billowy tulle veil, ruffled at the edge, was attached to the shirred halo coronet at the nape of the neck and cascaded over the train its full length.

The bride wore no jewels. She carried over her arm a drooping garland of lilies of the valley, narrower and softer than the conventional bouquet.

Engagement of Virginia Cave And Thurston Wright Pettus Announced at Birthday Party

THE engagement of Miss Frances Virginia Cave, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Estil Cave, 25 Washington terrace, and Thurston Wright Pettus, 33 Westmoreland place, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, was announced yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Cave for a group of her daughter's friends. The guests were invited to celebrate Miss Cave's birthday, and were told of the announcement on their arrival. The bride-elect and her fiancé are members of the younger social group. The wedding will be a notable event of the fall.

Miss Cave is a graduate of Mary Institute and was presented to society at a reception in the fall of 1932, after attending Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., for two years. ## Out-of-Town Exhibitors in Horse Show

THE St. Louis Spring Horse Show, which started out to be a more or less private exhibition of St. Louis and St. Louis County horses, took on sectional importance during the last week with the announcement of the admission of noted out-of-town exhibitors and the announcement of an unusually large list of trophy donors.

Ray Bartholomew, chairman of the Trophy Committee, has announced that trophies for the show, which is to be held at the Missouri Stables Arena, May 16, 17 and 18, have been presented by Charles W. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Burkhardt, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Sinton, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred N. Engle, Mr. C. D. Behymer, F. J. Mulligan, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Brinkworth, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell III, Dr. H. W. Soper, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Gray, Mrs. Dorothy Hyland, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Losse Jr., D. P. Richards, Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson, Miss Henriette Pirrung, Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Winter, Mr. and Mrs. George Lauffer, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Westerbeck, Dr. William Gadsby, Ingram P. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Scott Sharpe and Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Berkley.

A pig race has been devised for the women. Four teams are to be selected with two competing each of the first two nights and the winners taking part on the closing night.

William N. Sinton, president of the show, is organizing a special women's team and the Junior League team has been turned over to Bradford Shinkle Jr. Two other teams, the student groups, are to be brought together by Fred J. Berkley.

The Junior League team will be composed of Miss Jane Johnson, former Valedictorian; Miss Marie Eleanor Busch, Miss Jacqueline Busch Jones and Miss Betty West.

The potato race, novelty feature of the men's section of the program, calls for dexterous riding of polo ponies, so most of these riders will be chosen from the St. Louis Country Club and the old Kildee Polo Club. Bradford Shinkle, Paul Bakewell II and Julius Van Raalte have charge of organizing the teams for this event. Those they have chosen to compete are: Mahlon Wallace Jr., Edward C. Simmons III, Edward K. Love Jr. and Hayward Niedringhaus of the St. Louis Country Club polo team, and Julius Van Raalte, John C. Krey and John C. Roberts Jr.

flowers were loosely held without ribbons.

The seven-year-old bridesmaids wore gowns similar in style to their mother's, but of pink organza with blue sashes and double ruffled at the hem. They wore leghorn poke hats also and carried smaller bunches of field flowers with blue predominating.

The bride's mother was attired in an afternoon ensemble of silver gray lace, with a long-sleeved jacket of chiffon in a matching shade, set off by a shoulder corsage of frilly lavender orchids, tied with silver ribbons. Her hat of silver gray horsehair and tulle was trimmed only with a silver quill, extending from the side bandeau over the medium brim and low crown. Mrs. Moulton was gowned in brown lace designed with a brown silk cape. With it she wore a hat of lacy fabric and a gardenia corsage.

Mr. Moulton was attended by his brother-in-law, James Crawford Ward, as best man. His other groomsmen were: Dr. Willard Bartlett Jr., a brother-in-law; W. Finley McElroy Jr., Earl Kieselhorst, Henry Jenkins Jr., and Herbert N. Jones.

The church was simply decorated with flowers used only for accent at the chancel rail and on the altar. All white blossoms and tall palms decorated the entrance to the sanctuary and flowers in profusion were arranged high over the crosses at the altar in a kind of arch. The brass candelabra, wrapped in green smilax, held lighted white tapers. The first 14 rows of pews in the church were marked off by white streamers and reserved for the families and close friends.

A buffet supper for the bridal party was served at the Caradine home, 30 Portland place, following the ceremony. Here again spring flowers were arranged informally throughout the lower floor. The wedding cake formed the centerpiece of the table set in the dining room. At either corner of the table were white sweet peas and lilies of the valley in the center of which stood white candles.

Mr. Moulton and his bride left by plane for New York last night, and will sail shortly for a two months' honeymoon in Europe. On their return they will occupy an apartment at 10 North Kingshighway.

Among the out-of-town guests who came for the wedding were: Mrs. Henry Sanger of Detroit, the former Miss Elizabeth Staley, the bride's roommate at Miss Porter's School; an aunt of the bridegroom, Mrs. Alexander Harsh of Nashville, Tenn., and a cousin, Mrs. Frank E. Miller of Memphis, both of whom are staying at the home of the bridegroom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Horton Watkins, Clayton and Warsaw roads.

The bride attended Mary Institute and Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., and afterwards studied at Mile. Boissier's School at Neuilly-sur-Seine, outside Paris.

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

COLLECTORS of Americana and connoisseurs of the wistful souvenirs of the departed dry era should look up Roswell Flower Taylor, who went to college with this department long ago and is now one of the first citizens of Watertown, N. Y. Mr. Taylor, an undergraduate, never touched the stuff, having some sort of an arrangement with himself not to drink until he was 30, but all during the age of gastronomic frightfulness he was busily laying down a cellar against the happy date of his falling off the wagon. Case lots and carloads of early Matt Winkie and Longacre Pharmacy Gordon gin were snapped up by him the way Mr. Rosenbach buys a first edition Shakespeare. He must have an almost complete exhibit of the now very rare fabricated Holland gin that came in a variety of brown stone crocks along 1925 and tasted vaguely of neat's foot oil. Just after that, in the early Dan Moriarty and John Perona age, appeared the first imitation Barcardi in wicker-wrapped gallon jugs that sold for $35 a copy. "White Horse Cellar" scotch, built of reclaimed alcohol and creosote, was very popular about that time, and the first bogus 1921 Lanson champagne was making an appearance, with great ceremony, at the emergent plus speakeasies in the West Forties and Fifties.

Mr. Taylor, if we recall correctly, was in his heyday as a collector about this time and may have an almost complete library of wines and strong waters of the era. As a matter of fact, that most fascinating of Manhattan institutions, the Museum of the City of New York, could well afford a permanent collection of the beverages and their containers of the years of the great foolishness. They are historic memorabilia of importance and, all ready very hard to find, in a few years they will be impossible to acquire. Collectors of speakeasy eras report them almost entirely extinct, save in the files of connoisseurs.

More and more the Hollywood influence is making itself perceptible around the boulevards and bistros of the town. Particularly in the matter of clothes. Actors and directors, arriving overnight from a sub-tropical climate where hats and overcoats are unknown, have brought about a flurry in gabardine suits, rolled half length gelf socks showing but an inch or two above shoe tops, unmatched sports jackets and tweeds of outrageous and noisy pattern. The fact is that people are passing most of the year on the Coast simply don't have a hard time to suit their name, let alone anything heavier than a top coat.

The youth, noted for small-time hits arrived recently in dead of winter with 15 sports outfits ranging from gabardine jackets to flannel slacks, a couple of tropical weight dinner suits and not a single hat or overcoat. He never left his car for a fortnight save to dash for a heated hack, and kept turning up! Sunday afternoon parties where everyone else was conventional, adopted in a confection of striped sweater. Everybody thought it was a gag.

Mostly film folk stop at the Waldorf Towers, the Lombardy or the Warwick, and can be seen hoisting all ones and carrying on with a high display of social elegance, lifting their little fingers away from their glasses and fringing waiter aprons with their versions of the fashionable French language, at Jack and Charles and the Colony Restaurant. Broadway first nights attract them in droves because there they can promenade in show between the acts and arouse the most riotous disturbances among the autograph fiends.

In Paris, if you are staging a sufficiently elegant flag-raising, you can hire mounted police in dress uniforms to maneuver in front of your town house while your guests arrive but the only galloping door-man in New York works at Dimitri's Club Gauche in Sullivan street. He is a nightly fixture there, and one of the prominent features of Village high life at the moment. His name is Bruno and he is an Argentine who has been on the job at Dimitri's for a year now. Recently he complained of homesickness, started hearing hoofbeats and dreaming of cowboys roaming the pampas, and Dimitri was afraid he was going to pack up for home at any moment. Finally Bruno said perhaps a horse might make him feel better, and a horse was commissioned post haste. Now he saddles patrons with a "buenos noches, señor, from the saddle, and when the wanderlust seizes him, gallops up and down Sullivan street emitting loud gaucho yells. Life in Sullivan street is reported to be a bit more what with Bruno and all.

"Rough Dry Skin is caused by dead surface cells—they can easily be melted away..."

thus prevents sun and wind from causing dryness and roughness.

Smooth Pond's Vanishing Cream on your face, neck, arms, hands, every night after cleansing. It's a non-greasy cream—fluffy—fragrant—and germ-free. Possessing remarkable keratolytic powers—it melts roughness and chapping in one application. The texture of your skin grows finer—smoother—clearer. You will soon see that weathered look disappear; in its place will come a youthful dewy freshness. Your skin will glow with young blushing color.

Keeps Powder on for Hours...

Pond's Vanishing Cream not only improves the skin, but actually flatters it. Just a film conceals little blemishes—absolutely ends face shine and gives the skin a silken finish.

You'll find, too, that it keeps powder fresh and even. Hours after you've "made up," your skin still looks fresh, inviting, radiant.

Try Pond's Vanishing Cream at once. Mail coupon this very day. See for yourself what this world-famous cream will do for your skin.

HAVE sun and wind made your skin harsh—dry—leathery? This harshness is just a coating of dried, worn-out cells that linger on the surface. Dermatologists call it keratin. They say it can actually be melted away and the new, smooth skin, aglow with fresh color, brought out.

What happens to Dried-Out Cells:
 A leading dermatologist explains it in this way:
 "The cells on the surface of the skin are constantly drying. It is therefore necessary to quicken the shedding of these dried-out cells with a keratolytic cream."
 "When vanishing cream is applied, its keratolytic action melts away these harsh, dry particles that coat the skin. Then the fresh, smooth skin beneath appears."
 This cream also preserves the moisture in the skin from too-rapid evaporation and Sincere belief at Leppert-Roos that a customer should have her coat when wanted—that every day delay detracts from the value of the storage service, is evidenced by the record of prompt service given in the past. This, plus many exclusive features and free services, are just a few of the reasons why the Leppert-Roos method is the greatest fur storage value in St. Louis.

Premier Calls "Armed Latinity" Defender of Civilization—Traces History of Modern Descendants of Ancient Rome.

BY BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy.

ROME, May 4.
THE Rome accords concluded between France and Italy—accords which placed an end to a long period of sometimes acute controversies—and manifestations deriving from them have placed again in wide circulation the word Latinity.

Again there is talk of the Latin sisters, Latin civilization again exalted. What corresponds today to the word Latinity? What is today behind this word? Is Latinity still a power in the contemporary world or only a mental reminiscence?

Before answering these questions it is opportune to enumerate those which can be called Latin peoples. They are the Italians, the French, the Spaniards, the Portuguese and the Rumanians. Other nations, like Belgium and Switzerland have parts which can be called Latin. In the same manner the South American people can be considered Latin.

There exist countries wherein the impress left by Roman civilization reveals itself and is typically continuous. These peoples have in common some fundamental features distinguishing them sharply from others. These features are race, tongue, religion, habits, mental type and historical relations.

History of Latin Race.

The original Latin race, farmers and shepherds inhabiting Latium seven or eight centuries before Christ, had modest numerical proportions. Alongside the Latins there were all other Italian races descending from Indo-Aryan stock and the mysterious Etruscans from Asia Minor.

Rome first subdued the Italian peoples by arduous wars, then destroyed Punic naval supremacy, conquered almost all Western worlds and extended the bonds of the empire from the North Sea to the Indian Sea, from the Atlantic to the Black Sea.

The empire lasted some centuries during which Gaul, Iberia and Dacia were completely Romanized. It is difficult to speak of Latin races but there is no doubt the "average" of Italians, Portuguese, Spanish, French and Rumanians present physical common "features" in so far as height, complexion, color and hair are concerned; this physical type visually differentiates these peoples from Anglo-Saxons, Germans and Slavs.

Deeper are the affinities between Latin peoples from the point of view of language. The national languages of France, Spain, Portugal, Italy and Rumania are similar and present common origin from spoken Latin—that is the tongue actually talked by legions of the common people. A particular affinity is to be found between Spanish and Italian.

From the religious point of view the Latin people in the majority are Catholics except in Rumania. It is true Catholicism is not only Latin because German countries like Austria or Slav countries like Poland are also Catholic but there is no doubt the great Catholic bloc is formed by Italy, France, Spain, Portugal and Latin-American nations.

Undeniable are the affinities of manners since "manner of living" and to the mental viewpoint there is no doubt the imprint of Latin genius (clearness, equilibrium and realism) is still largely recognizable among the peoples who claim the civilization of Rome.

Modifying Elements.

Naturally, invasion of other races—like the Arabs in Spain—introduced other modifying elements in the spiritual characteristics of the Latin people but the base has remained. Italy offers typical examples of this assimilation of foreign elements on the Latin background.

The Lombards, for example, a German race, forgot their lan-

The Future of the Interstate Power Holding Company

Analysis of Wheeler-Rayburn Bill, Designed to Regulate Corporate Family, "the Only One Known Which Can Keep Alive Nine Generations Contemporaneously," With a Recommendation for Adjustment of the General Incorporation Laws Also.

By PROF. WILEY B. RUTLEDGE, Dean, College of Law, Washington University.

THE Wheeler-Rayburn bill, now pending in Congress, provides for practically complete dissolution of interstate power holding companies by 1940, allowing the intervening period for transition. Exception is made for the continuance of "geographically and economically integrated systems," which by reason of special circumstances can present proof of need for their existence. Some administrative discretion is allowed for extension of the period within which dissolution must occur, when special considerations dictate this.

The proposed act does not represent snap judgment. It is the result of more than five years of investigation by the Federal Trade Commission and other bodies, whose recent reports to Congress furnish strong support for the bill in the assembled facts. The underlying theory is that the holding company combines the evils of national or near-national monopoly, with absentee ownership, almost unlimited possibility for financial manipulation, and practically complete immunity from effective public regulation.

PROF. WILEY B. RUTLEDGE.

Two Fundamental Objections To the Holding Company

Two fundamental elements appear in this theory. One is opposition to the concentration of the industry, through replacement of independent local units by systems of national or nearly national scope. The other, closely connected with the first, but to be differentiated clearly, is the fact that the holding company involves such immense possibilities for financial and managerial abuses that it should go. Both of these conceptions appear in the President's message submitting the bill to Congress. He thinks the control and the benefits of "the essentially local operating utility industry" should be taken "out of a few financial centers" and given back "to the localities which produce the business and create the wealth." He also thinks the abuses so gross and so "inherent in its very nature" that the holding company no longer should "be tolerated as a recognized business institution."

Defenders of the system dispute the truth of the premises and deny the conclusion. Admitting abuses, they advocate their elimination, but only by methods which will preserve the system's essential integrity. The argument takes two forms. Stronger in immediate appeal is the "salvage" argument, which urges that termination would work irreparable injury to present holders of holding company securities. The extreme of this viewpoint was stated recently by a utility official testifying before the House Committee on Interstate Commerce: "The mathematical procedure is too complicated to permit the distribution of the company's holding pro rata among the stockholders, and the raising of cash for distribution would entail loss of most of the value of the company's assets."

If the statement is true it is practically an admission that these securities reflect no real value presently except that which comes from the mere fact of combination and control of the operating companies. In that case, the argument becomes a smoke-screen to prevent the disclosure of a vast over-capitalization. In so far as the statement is not in accord with the facts, the argument fails. In any event, however important it may be to protect him so far as is consistent with the welfare of other interests, the present investor is simply one element in a complex of interests affected by the holding company system. Certainly he cannot claim to have the future national policy determined exclusively upon the basis of his protection and without regard to the interests of the customer, the future investor and the community as a whole.

Argument That System Has Justified Existence

The second argument is more far-reaching. It is that the holding company has earned immortality upon its merits. It is responsible, so it is said, for the vast expansion in power consumption since 1910, when it first became a significant force in the power field; it has produced large economies in operation and lowered consumer costs. In spite of the insull and other crashes, it is said to offer greater investment security, because "holding companies, through intentional wide separation of their units, are able to diversify their operations and minimize the effects of business fluctuations." In other words, utility concentration is sound in economic principle and the holding company is the best instru-mentality for creation and maintenance of the large unit system.

It is true that during the 25 years of holding company domination, there has been a great expansion of power service; that on the whole, with some notable exceptions, the quality of service has been satisfactory; that in general the cost per unit of power to the consumer has been reduced. The notion that the holding company makes for investment security in the public utility field simply is nullified by the facts. The idea that it is responsible for the progress in other respects ignores important facts. Certainly technical advances in engineering management and general business methods, quite apart from their exemplification in the holding company, have had much to do with this progress. Also, on the whole the quality of service rendered by municipal and independent operating units has been as good as that of the holding company system. Probably, also, these units supply service at rates as low as, if not lower on the average, than those given by holding companies. It has not been demonstrated that the national power unit is more efficient, and in some respects it may be less efficient, than the regional or local unit.

Hard to Discover Any Advantage to Investor

It is difficult to find any clear advantage which has come through the holding company for the investor, the general consumer or the public which could not have been created through direct purchase of physical assets or the processes of merger and consolidation. It is true that these methods of combination are slower and that they face some legal obstacles which the holding company so far has been permitted to surmount. But it is questionable whether the slower methods would not have created a sounder and more enduring structure, and whether the courts have not nullified important statutory policies by constructions which permit evasion by the holding company of restrictions imposed upon combination by the laws governing merger and consolidation.

There is no doubt that the holding company is the most pliable and facile instrumentality for the concentration of wealth and economic power which history has devised. Within 25 years it has assembled into national systems 80 per cent of all power distributed in the United States. In the power field it has issued more than two billion dollars in securities, controlling thereby investments of 10 billion dollars in operating companies. Prior to 1929 a single company, with $750,000,000 capitalization, had control of corporations with over three billion dollars in assets, and capitalists dominated the holding company with less than $300,000,000 invested. The holding company has accomplished what the "corner," the "pool" and the "trust" of previous generations sought, but were unable to achieve.

A perversion, rather than a mere abuse of the original state laws which gave it being, with the acquiescence and eventually in some cases the positive aid of the state legislatures and courts, it has set at naught the national policy as expressed in the Sherman Anti-trust Act. No other instrumentality could have produced in the same time the degree of consolidation and concentration which it has accomplished. Unchecked, its possibilities for future expansion are almost unlimited.

It is too early to determine generally whether our future economic systems will be composed primarily of units approximating national scope or of units local or at most regional in extent. Certainly the trend has been constantly toward the larger unit, and the writer believes this will continue. If we are to return to a smaller unit system, the obvious place to begin is with the holding company. But if the tendency toward the large unit continues, the question for the immediate future will have to do with specific industries. In some fields, notably in communications and transportation, the requirements of modern life dictate the national or nearly national unit.

Reasons National System Does Not Apply to Power

However, in view of the present limitations upon the transmission of power, especially in the form of electrical energy, it is not apparent that this is true of the power industry. There is no operating reason for connecting plants in Colorado with others in Missouri, Illinois and Maine. There are considerations which make regional units desirable, but none save purely financial reasons which require national units. The regional and local units seem to supply the logical instrumentality and probably the most efficient for this industry. It is susceptible, also, to local regulation in greater degree, and for that reason should appeal to those who favor local self-government and fear the development of Federal bureaucracy.

The writer believes that the second element in the President's policy constitutes the stronger reason for dissolution of the holding company system. Whether the future economic organization will be composed of large or small units, the abuses which have characterized the operation of holding companies must go. It has brought with it a train of corporate perversions, some inherent in its structure, others of general corporate application which it has magnified by the scope of its operations. The period of its development has seen the invention and acceptance by State legislatures, in some cases at its behest, of such speculative devices as no-par stock (removing one of the few remaining guarantees of honest capitalization); the stock dividend (by which paper surpluses are converted into the illusion of additional holdings or the reality of additional speculative opportunities, and by which also the payment of real dividends has been avoided); non-voting stock, preferred and common (by which the so-called "owner" was stripped of even the semblance of voice in determination of major policies); "rights" and other unusual types of "participations" (which are neither stock nor bonds, fish nor fowl, but almost waterproof opportunities to share in the profits of market advances in stock), etc. All of these devices have been employed by power holding companies, probably to a larger extent than by any other industry.

"Writing Up and Down" Companies' Capitalization.

If the holding company did not invent, certainly it magnified the evil of over-capitalization. It is possible by pyramiding company upon company to capitalize $1000 in physical assets through successive stock issues, each based upon the nominal or par, market or book values of the stock held in the underlying company, for several thousand dollars. The genius of an Einstein could not determine the ultimate limits of this process, which is inherent in, and peculiar to the holding company. In some instances, due to the intense competition during the booming twenties between district systems for stocks of operating companies, prices were paid running from 100 to 150 times the book values of these shares. The holding company, of course, capitalized them at cost to it. In response to pressure from utility interests, many states have created other opportunities for "watering" by passing provisions which make the judgment of the directors conclusive on the question of the valuation of property for the purposes of capitalization, and some permit revaluation by them from time to

Riviera and Monaco Pleasure Haunts Suffer as Result of Flight of American Tourists

Foreign Spending Falls Off From $800,000,000 to $133,000,000, and Big Hotels and Luxury Shops Are Hardest Hit.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
MONTE CARLO, May 4.

THEY'VE taken the "O" off the roulette wheel at Monte Carlo! To the great majority of everyday people that doesn't mean a thing. But to the tens and hundreds of thousands of pleasure seekers who used to frequent the French Riviera, and the principality of Monaco, it indicates, more than rags and beggars do in New York, Chicago and Kansas City, an outward sign of the depression.

For when the house announced that during certain hours of the afternoon and evening the zero on the wheel of fortune would be suppressed it meant something drastic had to be done to restart the golden stream that has made Monaco a taxless paradise.

The depression has hit the Riviera with a vengeance. It has hit Monte Carlo even harder. The players still appear at the gaming tables but it is a cheap crowd that responds to the announcement that admission is free. Even the almost unbelievable fact that the syndicate relinquishes, over specified periods each day, the one number on which the bank always wins, is that increasing the Casino's clientele simply because the people aren't here anymore.

From one end of the Cote d'Azur to the other—from Bandol and Marseilles to Cap d'Antibes and Mentone—it is the same story—empty cafes, shuttered hotels, abandoned shops which formerly catered to the foreign tourists' trade, and dried up American bars.

To put it in dollars and cents one need only quote the leading newspaper of Nice, the Eclair du Soir, which announces sadly that while foreign tourists spent in France, in 1927, more than 12,000,000,000 francs ($800,000,000) in 1934 they spent less than two billions ($133,000,000). The largest part of this loss is borne by the French resorts of Deauville, Biarritz and the Mediterranean, chiefly those of the latter region. Paris also has suffered, especially in hotels and luxury trade.

Various factors are responsible for the wholesale desertion of France and her resorts by foreigners, especially Americans. The British started the exodus about two years ago when their country left the gold standard. With around 70 francs instead of 125 to the pound the remittance men who cluttered the Cote d'Azur from the Italian border to the mouth of the Rhine, began to clear out. It was cheaper to pay income taxes in England than to stay on the Riviera with the depreciated exchange. Besides the French prices were slow in coming down and deflation—such as exists—did not really start until the dollar also was depreciated.

Today, with the pound worth about 70 francs and the dollar seldom rising above 15, it is literally impossible for the average tourist—and it is the tens of thousands of average tourists who spend most money in the long run—to stand the gaff. Hotel prices have tumbled, but it is too late. Most of the hotels have been forced to close or curtail their staffs to such an extent that they no longer have the attraction of the old days. Only one de luxe hotel in Cannes, the Queen Resort of the Riviera, is anywhere near meeting expenses, and that only because it was built in pre-war times and consequently is under-capitalized.

Shift in Exchange a Cause.

Villas Not Open Recently.

Those who will retain their villas—British lords and American millionaires for example—have not opened them for several seasons. Instead, when they do come South they put up at hotels, thereby dispensing with numerous servants and avoiding houses full of guests.

But there is another side to the picture. Down on the Brittany coasts and off Biarritz, Hendaye and Bordeaux, French fishermen used to make a good living. The de luxe hotels of Paris and the resorts paid handsomely for the catch. Today there is little or no demand for luxuries. The fishermen have suffered along with the hotels and cafes.

And, as if to add insult to injury, America is calling—for the first time in history—to Europe's tourists. By steamship loads Frenchmen, Belgians and even Italians are "seeing America." Niagara Falls, the Empire State building, Radio City, the Washington Monument—and even the Grand Canyon—are entering the French language just as Rue de la Paix, Mont Martre, Champs Elysees and the Louvre and Eiffel Tower were, a few years ago, the American trade-mark of sophistication.

Paris Hard Hit.

The situation in Paris resembles that of the resorts. Again, according to the Eclair, one de luxe hotel in Paris lost 10,000,000 francs in 1933 while four others lost 8,500,000. What the small shops, where foreigners bought the little luxuries in the line of jewelry, perfumery, lingerie and silk unmentionables, engravings, etc., have lost is incalculable. Their shuttered windows speak eloquently, and tragically.

Official statistics also offer an

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Misery Pay for Missouri Legislators.

I HAVE read with great interest your strictures upon the antics of the General Assembly now in session. Your comments appear to have ample justification. The recent threat to withdraw Federal relief aid, because of the failure of legislation to provide the State's share of the burden, warrants another demerit. It would appear that the constituent elements of that law-making body are not entitled to a very high rating.

But what inducement is offered to men of ability and probity to become members of the General Assembly? The pay of the members is $5 a day for the first 70 days of a session and $1 a day thereafter. Even the larger per diem payment is insufficient to meet the expenses of decent living in Jefferson City. A member must therefore draw upon his own resources to meet his actual expenses, in addition to the temporary abandonment of his business and personal affairs. Membership, therefore, means actual financial loss instead of benefit. It thus becomes a luxury that can be afforded only by rich men or by those who expect to meet the financial loss by means other than their legitimate pay.

There is no great distinction in being elected to such an office. Judging from the recorded results, association with the other members in their official labors is not worth seeking. The social offerings of a session are surely not irresistibly attractive. The climate of Jefferson City is not different from that of the other cities of Missouri. It has no noteworthy metropolitan advantages. There is left only the prospect of some private gain or surreptitious advantage. Men who are both honest and competent do not seek public office upon any such inducement.

If the people of the State of Missouri wish to be more ably and effectively represented, their legislators should receive legal remuneration in greater amount. The pay above mentioned is fixed by Section 16 of Article 4 of the State Constitution. That provision was made in 1875, when $5 was considered money. We would hesitate to employ a $5-a-day mechanic to repair an automobile, or a $5 plumber to install bathroom fixtures, or a $5 carpenter to repair the back porch. But $5 men are employed to handle the finances of this sovereign State and to enact its laws.

Is it not about time to take thought upon what manner of man will serve for that pittance, and why he wants to do it? ROY M. HARDY.

When the Dimes Come Rolling In.

WHY all this fuss about the dime chain letters? It seems the "powers that be" are determined to prevent the poor people from getting any of the money that is in circulation, even if it's their very own!

It seems to me this undertaking is worthy of commendation. It increases the postal business a great deal; it gives employment to extra mail carriers, clerks, and that is worth while. And certainly if the chain is not broken, it will bring in big returns for a very small investment. No one is made to suffer and many are made glad and free from worry when their dimes begin rolling in.

ONE OF THE CHAIN GANG.

A Reply to Gen. Johnson.

FEW will dispute Gen. Johnson's great ability, or his broad general knowledge of human affairs. However, being human, he sometimes errs.

The General tells us what a blunder it would be to limit incomes to $10,000; how many household and other domestic servants it would put out of work. He doesn't mention the fact that when thousands of men are prevented from getting too much, millions of workers will be able to get their just shares without having to flunk to some money-made lord.

In answer to a question (April 29), the General intimates that we have more than enough circulating medium. That is probably true, but it is not circulating (ask John J. Jobless). Capitalists are sitting on most of it and have not the enlightened self-interest to employ this money in combination with labor for the benefit of all the people.

In answer to another question, Gen. Johnson tells us that production in excess of American needs is what hurt the American farmer. The General forgets that, because of low wages and high prices, more than half of the American people never did have half of their needs supplied; that there never was a time they were not in need of more cotton goods, bacon and bread. Contrarywise, the well-to-do, instead of going in for cotton goods, bacon and bread (home products), were inclined to over-indulge in silks, sweets and delicacies, often of foreign origin.

DEMOCRACY.

That Grade-Crossing Cartoon.

YOUR cartoonist did both the railroad and the general public a service in his recent grade-crossing cartoon. It will be fine if Government money eliminates a good many such crossings. The railroad in particular can use the added safe speed that will result.

THE BANKING BILL.

The measured criticism directed by a committee of the American Bankers' Association at the pending banking bill is in sharp contrast with the hostility shown toward this measure—along with virtually all the other major items on the Roosevelt program—at the recent meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

It would seem that the American Bankers' Association should know whether or not the bill in question threatens calamity to the banking structure of the United States. If the views of the committee are any guide—and they are the views of such men as Rudolf S. Hecht, president of the association; Robert V. Fleming of the Riggs Bank of Washington, D. C.; Tom K. Smith of the Boatmen's Bank of St. Louis, and Winthrop W. Aldrich of the Chase Bank—the bankers of the country, in general, find nothing in the bill to justify the professed fears of some of its opponents.

Controversy over the bill centers very largely around Title 2, the part dealing with the Federal Reserve System, and this is the part to which Mr. Hecht and his associates mainly devoted themselves. The heart of this section is the proposal to give the Federal Reserve Board—which is to say, Washington—greater control over credit than it has ever had. This change is in line with the needs of the country, and it is accepted in principle by the bankers' memorandum. The concern of the bankers is to see that the change shall be effected in such manner as to make the Federal Reserve Board "a body of such independence and prestige that it might be described as the Supreme Court of Finance and Banking."

To this end, the bankers suggest that the board be reduced from eight members, as at present, to five; this to be accomplished by the retirement from the board of its ex-officio members, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency, and by reducing the appointive members of the board to five as soon as a vacancy occurs. The bill as it now stands would keep the members at eight, including the two ex-officio members. There is nothing in dispute here between the bankers and the framers of the bill that is not amenable to compromise.

More important is the question of where final authority over open-market operations—an instrument of tremendous weight in the control of credit—shall be lodged. Control at present is exercised by the Governors of the 12 Federal Reserve banks—which means, in the last analysis, that it is exercised by New York. The last issue presented by the bill is whether control shall remain there or be transferred to the Federal Reserve Board at Washington.

Gov. Eccles of the board has recommended that the full Federal Reserve Board act as the open-market committee. The American Bankers' Association, through its spokesmen, has suggested that the committee be made up of the Federal Reserve Board (reduced to five members) and four Reserve Bank Governors. Thus the board, in a clean-cut split over policy between the board and the Reserve banks, would have the deciding voice; at the same time, the Reserve banks would have a large influence in the determination of open-market policy.

We cannot see that there is any gap between the A. B. A. and Gov. Eccles that cannot be bridged by compromise. Acceptance of the A. B. A. plan, or something similar to it, would have the advantage of enabling the Government to put its centralization plan into effect in an atmosphere of co-operation with the bankers.

Space does not permit a detailed analysis of the bill, but two other moot points may be taken up briefly. It has been argued that the Government wants the bill passed as a means of "financing the deficit" through inflation. The reply is that the bill will provide the Government with an effective means of checking inflation. The Government today, if it were so minded, could go in for inflation on a huge scale through the use of its stabilization fund and the powers it has under the Thomas amendment.

Second, critics of the bill have pointed out that under the retirement provisions a number of the present Federal Reserve Board members would be eligible to retire with pay. If they retired, the argument runs, the way would be open for the President to pack the board with men favorable to his policies. The sufficient answer to this charge of an ulterior motive back of the retirement section is found, say the sponsors of the bill, in the fact that of the present Federal Reserve Board, five were named by President Roosevelt and two were reappointed by him. Mr. Hamlin being the only hold-over.

Stripped of all camouflage, the vital question, we repeat, is whether the control over credit shall continue to be exercised to its present great extent by New York or shall be centralized in the Government at Washington.

On that issue, the Post-Dispatch has no hesitation in voting for Washington.

An American shoe man says half of England has huns. Then why twist the lion's tail? The effective approach would be to jump on his feet.

AN ALARMING PROSPECT.

Senator Harrison's compromise bonus bill seems destined for a short life, despite his assurance that it would be approved by the White House and despite the practical certainty that Mr. Roosevelt will veto either the Patman or Vinson bill. Apparently, only a sudden move for adjournment Friday saved the Harrison bill from defeat. Sentiment in the Senate is crystallizing behind a revised version of the Vinson bill, under which the average veteran would get immediate cash payment of about $500, as against $220 under the Harrison compromise.

When it was first brought out, the general impression was that the Harrison measure, if not inspired at the White House, at least enjoyed the unexpressed favor of the President. Much doubt was cast on this theory, however, by a statement of Secretary Morgenthau that the Treasury would view "with great concern the enactment of any bill which calls for large expenditures, without compensating additional taxes." As one commentator pointed out, it is very doubtful that the Secretary would have made such a statement without consulting the White House.

In the absence of a statement from the President, the Senators had a choice of gauging White House sentiment either from Senator Harrison or from Secretary Morgenthau. They have evidently chosen the latter barometer.

That means the real test of the bonus fight will come when the attempt is made to override a presidential veto. If the attempt is successful, the national debt will be increased by approximately two billion dollars; the veterans will once again have demonstrated their power over a cowardly Congress and the stage will be set for the final process of the pension grab, namely, service pensions for all who served in the World War.

The country may well view the prospect with apprehension.

REVOLT IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Sentiment in the Philippines over independence covers a wide range. It extends from the feeling of many warm-hearted Americans that freedom would be a liability rather than an asset, through the probable majority opinion favoring the proposal for independence after a 10-year transition period, to the extreme view of desiring complete liberty at once. Proponents of the latter policy are comparatively few in number, but fanatical in their advocacy, as shown in the armed revolt of the Sakdalista group, which has resulted in 70 deaths, chiefly among the rebels.

In a troubled time when even ardent Filipino patriots are beginning to have misgivings about the wisdom of launching the islands' career as an independent nation, there appears no likelihood that the extremist view will prevail either at the polls or through an armed coup. The Philippine Constabulary acquitted itself well in putting down the rebellion, and a popular majority approving the Commonwealth Constitution seems likely in the plebiscite of May 14. The radicals' talk of "American oppression" can have little popular appeal, since the Filipinos can see all about them the developments and beneficial results of American occupation, not to mention the contrast with the islands' condition under Spanish rule.

The United States, too, has kept its pledge to free the Philippines by approving the proposed Constitution, with its arrangement for full independence about 1946. This fulfills the ambitions of the great majority of Filipino independence advocates, but it is recognized that it by no means solves the problem of the islands' future. Major economic questions and the fear of aggression remain for solution. Discontent at home, as expressed in the futile revolt, will probably be the least of the Philippine Republic's troubles.

MR. RASKOB TURNS UP.

Who should turn up in the news the other day but John J. Raskob, a few short years ago a regular occupant of Page 1. If our readers need their memories refreshed, Mr. Raskob is the person Al Smith selected to be chairman of the Democratic National Committee and who, prior to his dizzy ascent in the party, was a Republican and a member of the Union League Club of New York. John's face got red when they insisted upon bringing that up.

A reporter found him gazing pensively over the rail of a ship making a world tour. Would he say a few words about the political situation? No. He was "not even interested any more." And at this point Mr. Raskob took the offensive: "Don't ask me," said he, "about Roosevelt or Farley or Father Coughlin. I don't know what's going on and I don't care." That may be considered a decisive end of the interview.

Yet the temptation to ask just one more question is overwhelming. At a time like this, when the national welkin rings with magic recipes to end the depression, to fill every citizen's pocket with money and to bring on the millennium, what has become of Mr. Raskob's plan? He was one of the first to propose making every man a king by means of a gigantic investment trust in which all of us would buy stock and reap from it luscious dividends.

Instead of shyly retreating into obscurity, Mr. Raskob might get out his old plan, dust it off and spring it again. If public response to other Utopian suggestions is any criterion, the Raskob plan is sure to get a rousing reception.

DIME LETTERS AS PUBLIC WORKS.

For everyone to get the promised $1562.50 return from the send-a-dime chain letters, each person would have to hand out that sum, it has been shown, and in addition spend from $1875 to $2812.50 on postage. There are some beneficiaries from the scheme, however, as pointed out by "One of the Chain Gang" in a letter today. They are the extra carriers and clerks required to handle the added flood of mail. This is all to the good, but on all too modest a scale. Just imagine how much more help the postoffice would need if, instead of sending such small objects as dimes and letters around, citizens could be induced to mail bricks and empty barrels to one another.

We live in a truly marvelous time when chain letters can be indorsed as a form of useful public works, and exchanging dimes can be touted as a method of redistributing wealth. The latter must be an adaptation of the practice on the fabled island where all the inhabitants made their livelihoods by taking in one another's washings.

GERMANY'S PAGAN MOVEMENT.

Having conquered all secular fields in Germany, the Nazis now are sponsoring the attempt to win the people away from their established churches and convert them to the Nordic pagan cult. The Government has taken no official stand in the matter, but there is ample evidence that it approves the movement. While Christian organizations are forbidden to have public mass meetings, permission was granted for the Germanic Pagan Faith Movement to hold a huge demonstration, attended by 15,000 persons, in the Berlin Sportsplatz a few days ago. While numerous Catholic priests and Protestant ministers alike are held in concentration camps, the leaders of the pagan group are unmolested and many, in fact, hold high Government positions.

The pagan movement is an outgrowth of the excessive nationalism that is the mainstay of the Nazi credo. It spurns the Christian faith because of its non-Aryan origin, and substitutes therefor a form of nature worship and a deification of the German spirit with Hitler as its God-send leader. Its advocates deny they would revive the worship of Thor, Wotan and other Teutonic gods, but Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, one of the cult's originators, has demanded return to the ancient deities. In fact, he has written that he considers Charlemagne's conversion of the early Germans to Christianity, in 785 A. D., to have been a great national misfortune.

This mass effort to persuade the German people to reject religion and take up paganism can be nothing other than abhorrent to the foreign opinion that Hitler has so industriously courted. Further, it is likely to be the most difficult task any Nazi agency has undertaken. A people may submit to dictatorship over its workaday activities, but history shows how fiercely resented are onslaughts on matters of conscience.

The Higher Sanity

WISDOM AND WISDOM. By Joseph Jastrow. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York City.)

DR. JOSEPH JASTROW, one of our most widely known psychologists, here elaborates in a volume of nearly 400 pages a quite obvious thesis, to wit, that in the matter of forming beliefs, "wish diversifies wisdom." In other words, it is a common failing of the human mind to believe what it wishes to believe, supporting its illogical conclusions by the pseudo-logical structures of rationalization.

Anyone who has arrived at a stage of development in which he is able to realize that there is no advantage in giving the wrong answer to the right question (or vice versa, which is more common and worse), must feel that the thesis was scarcely in need of formal academic treatment. For, in the discussion of practically every question of whatever nature, it is plain to see that the desire to arrive at the correct answer, in spite of tyrannical fashion, in spite of personal and group prejudices and interests, and in spite of the social penalties of non-conformance, is so rare as to be in effect practically non-existent.

If this were not true, ours would be an altogether different world; and as for those who insist that a world should be reasonable, surely heaven is their home.

What Dr. Jastrow offers here may be described as a museum of human follies in the realm of credulity, his specimens being chosen from a wide range of history, beginning with one Alexander, a miracle-monger of Asia Minor in the second century who "trimmed the fatheads" of his day, to the latest psychic cults engaged in trimming the equally fat heads of our admittedly enlightened age, which, as we well understand, is the only really "modern" age that has ever been.

There was some excuse for the poor ancients but hardly any for us, considering that we now have the Science of Psychology to guide us. And it is not as though we had merely one such science. Have we not, indeed, quite a nice assortment of differing psychologies, admitting of a liberal range of choice in the matter of strictly scientific truth about the mind of man, if any?

The range of choice is so liberal, in fact, that the behaviorists even succeeded, for a while at least, in dispensing with the psyche in psychology, explaining everything very simply in terms of muscular reactions. At the other extreme, those who like their superstitions brought up to date may revel in the virtual demology of the superlativists Freudians.

But even with such an embarrassment of psychological truth, some people still go on being unscientific in believing just what they wish to believe. So much so, that even the psychologists have been suspected, and a year or so ago there appeared a most intriguing and certainly very able study under the heretical title, "Psychology: Science or Superstition?"

However, it is different with Dr. Jastrow, he being a "naturalistic" psychologist; and anyone can see that only the naturalistic is really true after all; though there does arise the embarrassing question as to just what may be the limitations of the natural. It is a question that arises more than once in Dr. Jastrow's discussion.

"Prepossession," says Dr. Jastrow, "compromises the general inclination to bend thinking toward a conclusion reached in advance." To be thus "prepossessed" is to be unscientific, according to the doctor, and quite obviously he is right.

But, without questioning in the least the utter nonsensicality of most of his specimens of human credulity, it is precisely "a conclusion in advance" that the book was written to support, and in the very effort to combat prepossession, he has produced an imposing example of it.

For he begins with the gratuitous assumption, unyieldingly held, that whatever physical scientific theory, with its present persuasions, its inherent self-limitations and its arbitrary exclusions, has not proved to be true, must therefore be false! And that is a curious sort of logic!

His acceptance as final of that "standard order of thinking which leads to science" (that is to say, science as now understood), automatically limits his inquiry to a single phase of apparent reality. By his acceptance, he virtually affirms that what is already known is, in kind, all there is to know—rather a smugly cocksure state of mind for a scientific seeker after truth in a universe as mysterious as ours!

In this connection, it would seem to be in the interest of sanity to consider that one may be over-credulous in either a negative or a positive sense, and that to be in either state of mind is, in the larger sense of the term, to be unscientific. That Dr. Jastrow is negatively over-credulous in his approach to any phenomena not already accommodated by the neat little patterns of the orthodox science of our day, is painfully apparent. He has only to see the label, "psychic," on any set of phenomena to know at once "there ain't no such animal." The ease with which he can dispose of such matters should be most gratifying to himself.

As a matter of well-known fact, there is an order of phenomena constantly occurring which are in no way even touched upon by Dr. Jastrow's "explanations." Thanks to the fact that his specimens are carefully hand-picked for their obvious follies and insanities, by far the greater portion of the book is easily accepted even by those who know that what is known about the mystery of life is pitifully little. But there is one chapter in which it is made clear to one intimately familiar with the particular case under discussion that the doctor is capable of leaping to a conclusion with very slight knowledge of the data involved—and that at second hand!

It is recorded that when Edison's phonograph was introduced to the French Academy of Sciences in 1878, a learned academician, who knew well the limitations of the possible, rushed toward the man who had demonstrated Edison's invention and seized him by the collar, crying, "Wretch! We are not to be made dupes of by a ventriloquist!" It is further recorded that, after six months of deliberation, the phonograph was pronounced an "acoustic illusion."

Indeed, men do commonly believe what they wish to believe in keeping with a "prepossession," which in turn may be a manifestation of the prevailing time-mood of the going fashion in ideas.

But it will always be too early to conclude that the limits of reality are known, and in the light of this certainty, one may join wholeheartedly with the author in the statement with which he concludes: "It is only a loyalty to a world in which wish and wisdom are rightly proportioned that can further the higher sanity."

NAPOLEON'S LETTERS TO MARY LOUISE. (Farrar &amp; Rinehart, New York.)

THE more than 300 letters of Napoleon here presented in book form for the first time already have appeared in many newspapers. Early last December, they turned up for sale at auction in London and were bought by the Institut de France and the Bibliotheque Nationale. They cover the years 1812, 1813 and 1814, beginning with the Emperor's betrothal to the Austrian Archduchess and ending with the parting at Fontainebleau. A foreword and a running commentary have been furnished by Charles de la Ronciere, Chief Custodian of the Bibliotheque Nationale of France. The volume is illustrated with 33 reproductions of famous paintings and facsimiles of letters.

Those who have read widely in Napoleonic literature will find little that is both new and important as history, but a certain interest naturally attaches to any intimate glimpses into the private lives of the great.

THE library of Columbia University recently sent out cordial invitations to meet Gertrude Stein and to hear the phonograph records which she has recently made under the auspices of American Speech, the National Council of the Teachers of English and the Erpi Picture Consultants, Inc., in the studios of the Erpi Picture Consultants, Inc.

As a choice item of contemporary Americana, can you beat it?

THE fashion for excessively bulky novels is getting to be funny, if not alarming. Tales of 500 closely printed pages are not uncommon, and there are not lacking superlatives which require nearly twice that much space in which to unburden their highly charged souls.

One of the most noisily publicized of our contemporary "masters" actually boasts that he has written 2,000,000 words of fiction in the past five years, and he has recently published a novel of 300,000 words. Should he not be ashamed of himself? Has anybody ever known or understood enough in any five years of his life to justify the use of that many printed words? It seems unlikely.

One wonders why the reading public doesn't strike. Maybe, owing to the "democratic" it wants plenty for its money, of maybe the success of "Anthony Adverse" started the fashion. But why does an author choose to give the public 300,000 words for $3, when he could get as much for one-third as many words? Surely he could say as much or more with the lesser number. It is true he would then have to devote at least three times the time and effort to the task. Perhaps that is why he lets himself rattle on without brakes.

Municipal Opera Picks Ten Additional Principals

Gladys Baxter to Return for "Teresina" in Opening Week—Alexander Gray, Star of Stage, Screen and Radio, Engaged.

TEN more principals for the coming 12 weeks of Municipal Opera have been announced by Laurence Schwab, new producing director, as he rounds out his plans for the summer.

They are Gladys Baxter, singing star of the last several seasons; Rosemary Deering, dancer, also seen here previously; Alexander Gray, Roy Atwell, Ada May, Marguerite Sylva, Leslie Adams, Jane Seymour, Helen Gray and Marjorie Peterson. Each is engaged for a specific production, or for a group of productions, in line with Schwab's policy of complete freedom from a stock system.

Miss Baxter, who first came to Forest Park in 1930, is now scheduled for one role, that of the Princess Borghese in the opening show, "Teresina." Miss Deering has several dancing assignments.

Alexander Gray represents a notable acquisition since he has won fame on the musical comedy stage and radio and appeared in several early screen musicals. His stage roles were in the "Ziegfeld Follies," "Sally," "Naughty Riquette," "Twinkle, Twinkle" and "The Desert Song." A baritone, he will be heard as Jim in "Rio Rita."

ROY ATWELL, long a star in vaudeville, will do the Prince Borghese in "Teresina." Ada May will re-create one of her original roles as Dolly in "Rio Rita." Marguerite Sylva, who was seen in "Golden Dawn" in Forest Park in 1929, and who has had a long experience in musical comedy, grand opera and on the concert stage, will be Roberta in the show of that name and Aurelia in "The Chocolate Soldier."

In Leslie Adams, Municipal Opera has a performer who has had every kind of a part from circus clown to those of Herbert Hoover and King George in "As Thousands Cheer" (New York company). He will be seen as Napoleon Bonaparte in "Teresina" and also in "Madame Sherry."

Jane Seymour, dramatic actress, has appeared in recent years in "The House Beautiful" and "I Loved You Wednesday." She is to be in three casts, those of "The Vagabond King," "Sunny" and "Roberta." Also in "Roberta" will be Helen Gray as Sophie, a part she created. Marjorie Peterson, from musical comedy and the dramatic stage, is an ingenue who will have the title role in "Sunny" and an important part in "Good News."

Only six persons have been engaged for the entire 12 weeks. They are Earle MacViegh, Marjorie Dille, Victor Casmore, Al Downing, Marion Huntley and Una Val. Another departure in policy is that, as will be seen from the above assignments, dramatic actors and actresses will be used in roles which call for their qualifications.

Schwab, who has spent the several days supervising the selection of choruses, is returning to New York, to remain there for about two weeks. Chorus rehearsals will get under way immediately.

Fiji Islanders See "Three Little Pigs"

A social event of considerable importance took place aboard the S. R. Franconia recently, when the ship's officers and passengers during a world cruise were host to Ratu Pope III, uncrowned King of the Fiji Islands. The stately ruler, who stands 6 feet 4 inches, was entertained by a showing of Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs." He was accompanied by the Bull of Benga and 30 fire walkers.

Ratu Pope is the direct descendant of cannibal kings who ruled the Fiji Islands before the British arrived. Though his title has no official existence today, he is recognized as King by the natives of the Fijis. Ratu and his retainers were tremendously pleased by Disney's masterpiece.

Highlands Begins Thirty-ninth Season

Harry Lange and his Commanders again have been engaged to furnish the outdoor entertainment programs at Forest Park Highlands, which today begins its thirty-ninth season. The opening week's offering is entitled, "In the Land of Melody." Roger Fox, who will direct the ballroom music, has arranged a variety of novelties for the opening week, in which he features June Curran, contralto, and Art Lepper, guitarist and tenor vocalist. More than 50 attractions at the park will be in operation today. The swimming pool will not be opened until better weather arrives.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS :: By Colvin McPherson

HOW ever the impression arose that gang killings were a thing of the past, so far as the movies are concerned, I do not know. But it seemed only a natural corollary of that house-cleaning last summer that we should see no more of the melange of murder which was always out on the table. Apparently there was some mistake. Comes now "G-Men" at the Shubert to top all previous efforts in its bumping-off, its rubbings-out. The difference is that the Government men ("G-Men," first of a cycle in glorification of the Department of Justice, is the most exciting, the most thrilling orgy of bang-bang in years. James Cagney, who worked himself into the good graces of the U. S. A. by "Here Comes the Navy" and "Devil Dogs of the Air," is able to forget his previous gang career on the screen and to blossom out as a nemesis of the proportions of the famous Canadian Northwest. He is a lawyer without a practice when the picture begins and, after a buddy in Government service is killed by the other side, decides to cast his lot with the men in Washington. His training period shows what a keen memory the producers have for Cagney's last two successes. He still is the tough little guy who defeats a superior officer superior officer has a pretty sister and sooner or later discovers that year's gang history, the Little Bohemia raid, the Kansas City station slaughter and many episodes in the careers of Dillinger, Fred Burke and other killers are reproduced. The dirty doings at the depot in our sister city start out to be of horrifying accuracy, in that the front of the station is shown, but take place on the tracks at St. Joseph or Des Moines. For purposes of the drama, Cagney and his opponents are well acquainted, and there is a love story, too, but such details are lost sight of in the blast of bullets and roaring of motor cars. Citizens who seek the truth will find it advisable to have some paper to tear or some gun to chew, for even "McFadden's Flats," a slow comedy about two former O'Fallon street residents who meet in New York, cannot relieve the strain on the nerves.

Thunder in the East.

GRANTING that "Thunder in the East," at the Fox, will be hard for the ordinary movie-goer to understand fully, it may still be said that the picture is one of the most notable of the year. It is a tragedy, a stern drama about a Japanese Naval officer who sacrifices everything, even his beloved wife, for his country. Many scenes were actually filmed in Japan, the remainder at maneuvers of the French fleet. Charles Boyer, as the officer, and Merle Oberon, as his wife, pass for real Japanese. The conclusion then is that "Thunder in the East" is believable, and as a picture to linger long in memory. The thing hard to understand is the officer's insane devotion to his country, but that characteristic of Hirohito's subjects has often been stressed by contemporary writers. To Americans concerned over affairs in the Pacific, "Thunder in the East" has the near-reality of the violence, the posse of peasants, the lightning, the storms and a big explosion in which chaos, too, is restored. But what changes have been made in the Monster! He can be soothed now by a few bars of the "Meditation" from "Thais," played by old Hermit Heggie, on a fiddle; he sheds his fiddle on finding that the fiddler is blind; he learns to smoke a cigar, to drink wine and to keep time with music. He even gets a vocabulary of the type the film producers first supplied to Francis Lederer. One realizes now that all being passed by in pledge week and shunned by the gang at the soda fountain. Poor old Monster! Even when his creator and Dr. Pretorius create a mate for him, he is doomed to disappointment. After days of pacing the corridor, he knows that even the mate is horrified at him. In 10 minutes, he sets off an explosion that wrecks the joint. It may be the last we shall see of him. Yet Wallace Ford came back after just such an explosion in "In Spite of Danger," a few weeks ago. Trained with Jean Dixon, a female Ned Sparks, Lowe proceeds to work out the case, while the police force sneers. In its plentiful bright remarks, "Mr. Dynamite" emerges as of superior worth.

The Bride of Frankenstein.

THE Monster that Dr. Frankenstein made is back again, at the Missouri Theater, and his creator tinkers around to give him a mate, who looks like Elsa Lanchester after a bad fright. The usual grotesqueries are there, the crimes, the violence, the posse of

Katharine Hepburn Effigy in Tussaud's

THE acting ability of Katharine Hepburn has been recognized and rewarded in many ways, by statuettes, scrolls and medals, of which the volatile Katie has enough to stock a fair-sized trophy room, but it remained for London to place the young actress on a new pinnacle. The day "The Little Minister" opened in the British capital, a wax figure of the star, in her original Gypsy costume, was placed on exhibition at Madame Tussaud's noted waxworks, along with Kings, Queens and historical personages. The flesh and blood Hepburn will be seen on the screen next in "Break of Hearts," modern romantic drama, with Charles Boyer and John Beal. She will be starred soon in the screen version of Maxwell Anderson's stage drama, "Mary of Scotland," in which Helen Hayes played here recently.

Little Theater Plans New Repertory Season

F. Cowles Strickland Again to Direct at Union Boulevard Playhouse—Total of 64 Performances Given by Amateur Group.

WITH the final performance of "Her Master's Voice" last Thursday evening, the Little Theater ended its first venture into the field of repertory, a plan which proved highly successful, according to F. Cowles Strickland, Little Theater director, and which will be employed again next winter.

Strickland, who on Friday night was re-engaged by the Little Theater board, has left for the East, where he either will direct at a summer theater in New England or prepare for a trip abroad later, not returning to St. Louis, in any event, until shortly in advance of the Little Theater's opening next fall.

The Union boulevard playhouse this year saw the production of five regular works: "Yellow Jack," "The Late Christopher Bean," "Richard III," "Tom Jones" and "Her Master's Voice," plus a special benefit week of "Best Sellers" for the College Club. The Little Theater gave 64 performances this year, as compared to 48 on its schedule last year and about 90 for the professional theater in St. Louis during the season.

At least five plays will be in next season's repertory, one of them "Wunderkind," by Gretchen Damrosch and Samuel Chotzinoff, which recently won a $250 prize in the Little Theater's annual original play contest.

In line with its increased activities, the Little Theater extended its subscription list from 850 persons to 1400. As its auditorium seats only about 300 people, an average of only 30 seats were available at the door for each showing.

Expansion of the physical facilities of the theater will be made almost necessary if the organization continues to grow, according to Strickland. Even this year, extra space had to be rented to permit Gordon Carter, scene designer, and his staff to work unhampered.

Other problems of space arose. Simultaneous rehearsals for two or three plays made varying requirements. For the last two productions, some 50 pieces of furniture, including a grand piano, had to be on hand at all times. Stage crews, made up of volunteer help, found themselves with a professional-size job.

In arranging for costumes, the production staff found that it could no longer rely on loans here and there but was forced to buy many outright.

Changes in the selection of casts have come, too. Increasing numbers of applicants have caused Strickland to adopt a policy of holding public tryouts only twice a year. The would-be actors are permitted to give brief readings and if they make the grade, are asked to return for tryouts later when casting for a specific production is under way. The only dearth of talent, according to the director, is of comely young women who aspire to stage careers. Strickland says there is a "crying need for ingenues."

In order to give the newcomers proper training, the Little Theater maintains a laboratory organization, which prepares one-act and full-length plays for Sunday night performance. In that manner, the director is able to judge the caliber of the performers before putting them into one of the repertory works. Standbys of the company who wish to show their versatility—the clowns who want to play Shakespeare, the tragedians who want to do light comedy—can prove, or attempt to prove, that the director has the wrong idea.

Opportunity also is given for members to try direction and for budding playwrights about town to see their works performed and hear them analyzed. They are spared a public attendance at laboratory productions.

Strickland's ambition for the next years is to develop a company of professional strength and offer some kind of salary to his actors. He is frank about his hopes to be able to take the company on tour, as many Little Theater groups, notably the Hedgerow players of Philadelphia, have been doing in recent years.

A glance over the casts will show that some names are coming to be identified regularly with Little Theater productions. Notable this year were Elliott Bergfeld, Blair Boyle, Frances Fliss, Charley Grace, J. William Lucas, Bruce MacFarlane, Frank Parker, Percy Ramsay, Sarah Selby, Gordon Sommers, Robert Tieman, May Tuckerman and Strickland himself.

ANOTHER impressive record for amateur players has been made this season by the Mummies, a band of 50 or so players, most of them youngsters, who have already put on three plays of merit at the Wednesday Club and will revive R. C. Sheriff's "Journey's End" on May 31 and June 1.

The Mummies are in their seventh season. Formerly a side issue of the Downtown Y. M. C. A., they severed all connections last fall, rented a studio at 4477A Olive street and have built up a thriving organization.

Their plays this year have been "The Mad Hopes," "John Farnham" and "Quality Street." Already looking forward to next season, they will choose five plays from the following list: "Valley Forge," "Twentieth Century," "The Guardsman," "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Moor Born," "House of Connelly," "Allen Corn" and "Mrs. Moonlight." The company will remain active this summer with a garden presentation of W. S. Gilbert's "Engaged" set for several performances early in August.

Only members of the Mummies appear in their plays and no public tryouts are held. Membership restrictions, however, are not severe and the company has undergone considerable enlargement in the last year.

The Mummies, too, have their Sunday night laboratory theater, which in the future will be given over entirely to production of original unproduced works of native playwrights. Details of a prize contest, to end next Jan. 1, are being worked out.

Willard H. Holland, who will be seen in "Journey's End," is director of the Mummies and Frederick Litschel Jr., technical director. Genevieve Albers, Sam Halley Sr., Sam Halley Jr., Stanley Jones, Angeline Mueller, Viola Perle and Rita Oberbeck had important roles this season.

Mae West in Gold Rush.

Mae West's next picture probably will have the background of Alaska during the gold rush days, and will carry the tentative production title, "Klondike." Miss West herself will write the story and will prepare the screen play, starting immediately. Her latest production, "Goin' to Town," is being edited for national release in a few weeks.

James Cagney (and Robert Armstrong) in "G-Men," at the Shubert.

those works, rather stereotyped now, in which a brash young son upsets all kinds of dignity and runs off with his brother's bride. Robert Young is the young man, Evelyn Venable the girl. Both fine performers, they put a spontaneity into the picture that might have been absent otherwise. "The Casino Murder Case" brings a new Phil Vance to the patrons. He is Paul Lukas, playing the part intelligently enough to command respect. And his feminine fellow, Rosalind Russell, right now is making many movies worth seeing. The murders are only incidental. Balancing of the program goes on with a color cartoon entitled "The Golden Touch." It tells the King Midas fable with modernized humor, picturing the greedy ruler as finally willing to trade everything for a hamburger sandwich, with or without onion.

Chasing Yesterday.

"Chasing Yesterday," at the Orpheum, is adapted from a famous novel, "The Crime of Sylvester Bonnard," by Anatole France. The principals are Anne Shirley, O. P. Heggie and Helen Westley. As things now stand, the famous novel has become a follow-up picture to "Anne of Green Gables" and with the crime attributed to nobody. "The Florentine Dagger," programmed with "Chasing Yesterday," permits Henry O'Neill to be the corpse and not the killer.

Vagabond Lady.

INVARIABLY in recent weeks, Loews has been offering well-balanced programs and again, with two pictures of no exceptional merit, the combination is such as to offer a pleasant session with the screen. "Vagabond Lady," taking place in the kind of a department store of which Berton Churchill would be the owner, offers the better entertainment. It is one of

Albert Spalding, Violinist, Plays In Kolar Concert

This will be the first concert in the Wagner festival planned by Erno Rapee at this time Sunday morning throughout the month. Orchestral music programmed for today includes the overture to "Rienzi," the Venusberg music from "Tannhauser," the prelude to the Third Act of "Lohengrin," and the overture to "Die Meistersinger." Another concert by Frank Black's string symphony orchestra will occupy the 6 to 7 p. m. period today on KWK and the WJZ net.

Albert Spalding, the violinist, who will be the soloist with Victor Kolar's symphony orchestra from 7 to 8 p. m. today on KWK, made his professional debut in Paris with Adeline Patti in when he was 20. Tours of Russia, Western Europe and this country soon won him recognition as a first rank virtuoso. Since then he has played all over the world and frequently has broadcast. He was the first American to sit as a judge at Paris Conservatory examinations. He enlisted as a private in the World War, rose to be a captain in the Aviation Corps, and was awarded the Cross of the Crown of Italy and the Cross of the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor for war services.

Spalding will play two movements of Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," Schumann's "Traumerel," his own setting of Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark" and the Sarasate "Romanza Andalousa."

The hour-long concert by the Mormon Tabernacle choir and organ will be carried by CBS chain stations at 9:30 a. m. Sundays, starting today. The concert comes from the great Tabernacle in Temple Square, Salt Lake City. Anthony C. Lund, veteran choir master of the Tabernacle, directs the concert, and the organist is Frank W. Asper. For these broadcasts, the organ and choir sets are shut off from the rest of the Tabernacle interior by a 2000-pound velvet curtain, which hangs from the 150-foot span of the roof to the floor 70 feet below. KWKX will pick up today's concert at 10 o'clock.

The winner of the Walter Damrosch award, a two-year fellowship at the American Academy in Rome, Italy, will be announced in a WJZ chain program from 6 to 7 p. m. Thursday, during which the winning music will be played. Deems Taylor will announce the award.

The Dream Ship concert on WGN (720) are now scheduled at 9:15 p. m. Mondays through Fridays.

IRENE WICKER, the Singing Lady, who has impersonated as many as 13 characters on a program, uses her hands to effect voice changes. Talking through her fingers, she shades her tones to suit the character types. . . . Jesse Crawford, whose organ recitals often are carried nights by KSD, has had little formal musical training. He was a professional dance pianist at 14 and a movie theater organist at 16. She has taken part in more than 1200 broadcasts, and has sung over 4800 songs into microphones. She has no favorite song, liking ballads and "hot" songs equally well. She does her own cooking at home, dislikes night clubs, likes to draw comic strip figures. She and her manager, Ted Collins, get along without a written contract. . . . Ferde Grofe, who has become musical director of the George Burns-Gracie Allen programs, has won high standing as a composer with his "Mississippi" and "Grand Canyon" suites and other music in the "modern" vein. He was born in New York in 1892, grew up in Los Angeles, played the viola and violin for 24 years in symphony and dance orchestras, for 12 years was music arranger for Paul Whiteman, and three years ago organized his own orchestra. His works include "Metropolis," a fantasy of New York; "Three Shades of Blue," "Tabloid," inspired by scenes at press time of a newspaper, and his arrangement of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Countess Olga Albani, the singer, has signed a contract for a starring role in a musical film to be made by Warner Bros. this summer. She will go off the air for two months for the purpose. It developed when she was signed for the picture that she was an exceptionally good dancer, so she will dance as well as sing in the movie. "The Mill Brothers" sailed yesterday for their

'Wired Radio' Tests Underway.

EXPERIMENTS with "wired radio" are being pressed in Cleveland, where the North American Co., which controls the patents, is installing special radio sets for the purpose in the homes of 200 employees. Programs are sent over the electric wires, transcriptions being used. It is said that the North American Co. owns the copyrights on half a million dollars worth of music, and has spent around $100,000 in making the transcriptions for the Cleveland tests. The company estimates that it can supply the wired programs for $2 a month.

NEW TUBE BUILT TO INCREASE TIRE LIFE 25 PER CENT

NEW black tube that is pinch-proof and leak-proof, designed to increase tire life 25 per cent, developed by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. It is pinch-proof because it is made of a tough black rubber compound similar to tire tread stock, and because it is formed with an extra-thick base. The tough stock and thick base not only prevent pinching, but resist cutting and wear, giving the tube far longer life.

Two features make the tube leak-proof. One is its specially compounded silver lining, which seals the rubber against air loss. The other is an all-rubber valve stem vulcanized into the tube as an inseparable unit. This valve construction also adds strength to the valve base and to the tube as a whole. The new product, known as the Firestone Sealtype tube, is said to give an average of 25 per cent longer tire mileage by preventing underinflation.

Ab Jenkins Builds New Car to Seek Higher Speed Marks

Expects to Beat His 24-Hour Record of 127 M. P. H. on Utah Salt Beds.

"America will continue to hold practically every important stock car speed and endurance record," Ab Jenkins, holder of 77 world, international and American automobile records, said, commenting on the threat of invasion by English drivers early this summer. A new car is now under construction in Indianapolis for Jenkins with which he plans to break his own records and set new marks that will keep the English drivers trying.

Jenkins now holds practically all the important automobile records in the limited and unlimited classifications run under the supervision of the American Automobile Association. His 24-hour speed record, an average of 127.22 miles per hour, is still considerably ahead of that of his nearest contender. In 1933, he swept the board from 200 miles to 3000 kilometers, bringing these records for the first time to America. In 1934, he swept past his own marks for new records up to 5000 kilometers.

First of the Englishmen who will use the salt beds in Utah in an attempt to set up a new 24-hour record will be Capt. G. E. T. Eyston. He has filed application with the AAA contest board at Washington, D. C., for permission to use a circular 10-mile track on the salt beds at Wendover and made reservations for timers and other AAA facilities. His car is being built in England.

John Cobb, another English driver and sportsman, has signified his intention of trying for American records. Cobb will probably bring over a 745-horse power Napier car, and is looked on as a formidable contender.

The Australian, Norman Smith, will voyage across some time this summer and attempt to put Australia on the map in an international way.

Packard Hypoid Gears Never Replaced When Properly Lubricated

Wear in the rear axle driving mechanism of Packard cars has been practically eliminated, according to engineers of the Packard Motor Car Co., through the use of hypoid ring and pinion gears. A recent check of Packard service stations in the principal cities of the country disclosed that since the Packard hypoid gears were introduced in 1927 there have been none replaced because of wear when properly lubricated. As with all other automobile axle gears, Packard engineers point out, hypoid gears require adequate lubrication with proper lubricants.

Packard has produced 207,000 cars since it first adopted hypoid rear axle gears.

The spiral bevel rear axle gears, generally used for automobiles, were originally developed by the Packard company, as were the machines for making them. Hypoid gears were further Packard pioneering.

Moves Used Car Store.

The Steiner-Fahrenkrog Co., Packard dealers, has moved its used car place to 3137 Locust street. The two-story building has been completely remodeled. The new location is more convenient to the firm's main showroom at 3101 Locust.

Millions of car owners are being robbed of gas, oil, power and smooth engine performance by old, worn out spark plugs. The Champion Spark Plug dealers in your neighborhood have organized a Committee of Vigilantes to put these modern highway robbers on the spot. They will inspect, clean, and test your spark plugs and show you why all spark plugs, even Champions, should be changed every 10,000 miles or once a year.

General Motors Spring Showing Here Closes After Week

Most Successful of Kind Held in St. Louis, Says General
Chairman O'Meara.

General Motors Spring Showing, which closed last night after a week in the Mart building, was the most successful of its kind the corporation has held in St. Louis, according to C. E. O'Meara, general chairman of the show.

The trend of public interest in the purchase of automobiles has been again demonstrated by the number of people attending this show, and the very apparent buying interest," O'Meara said. "The outlook for automobile business for the remainder of this year is very bright. The most conservative prophets of the industry have estimated the production of approximately 3,500,000 units in 1935 as against 2,800,000 in 1934; 1,986,208, in 1933 and 1,431,467 in 1932.

The new General Motors cars, with their attractive styling and improved features of safety and comfort, have received a most generous public acceptance. Features such as Fisher-built solid steel turret top bodies and hydraulic brakes and other mechanical improvements go to make up the points of interest.

Attendance Increase.
In spite of adverse weather conditions the past week, the attendance at this show was exceptionally good, showing a considerable increase over the number of persons attending the exhibit last year.

An added feature this year was the Style Show and Fashion Review held in collaboration with the Fashion Square group which is composed of 10 leading department stores in St. Louis. This Style Show and Fashion Review was outstanding in its attractiveness and drew many people to the Mart building.

Business at Show Good.
The automobile industry is undoubtedly a major factor in the present recovery progress and improvement. For example, four cars were produced and registered in the United States in 1895, whereas registrations last year totaled 21,690,789. In the automotive business, including new cars, trucks, gas, oil, replacements, accessories, tires and equipment and labor, constituted a $6,997,600,000 market.

The industry is now offering an improved product, and there is a vast replacement market made larger by the reappearance on the roads of cars which owners were compelled to store when the depression reached its low point. Their return brings the day of their ultimate replacement that much nearer.

The Spring Showing has been most gratifying, and we are exceptionally pleased with the final results. Every dealer in General Motors products in St. Louis has shown a material gain as a result of business obtained during the show. We are looking forward to a better show next year."

Attention to Detail Helped Hudson Car Break Stock Records

Careful attention to every detail is necessary if a car is to break records on the books of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. In setting the 36 records at Muir Dry Lake, California, recently, the Hudson stock sedan was backed by a trained crew of drivers and a pit crew who knew just how to get gasoline into the tank, inspect gas, water, oil and tires and send the car speeding on its way, in the shortest possible time.

Race on the windshield and the radiator had to be cleaned, drivers had to change places, and the entire car be inspected to make sure that nothing would interrupt its record-breaking pace. It was not necessary to change a tire, although the records for distances up to 3000 kilometers were broken by over seven miles an hour for cars of the same displacement class.

Three drivers spelled each other on the long grind, each running out two tanks of gas before he relinquished the wheel. This required about two and a half hours, so a driver was two and a half hours on duty and five hours off.

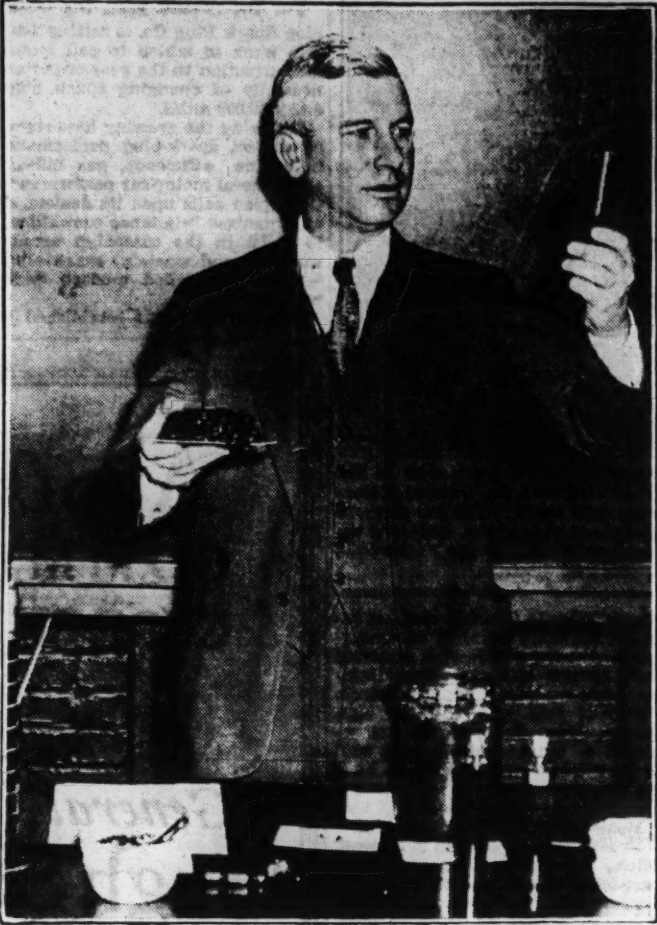

As soon as the car pulled in at the pits for gas, five men leaped forward. One removed the gas tank cap, two inspected the tires, the windup the windshield free of accumulation of dust and bugs, the examined oil and water. A tank hose was ready with the gasoline hose and as soon as the cap was removed gasoline under pressure was fed into the tank. A trifle over a minute was consumed for each pit stop. This represented about one-half second per mile of time.

'Gas,' Oil Economy, With Ample Power, Claimed for New Reo

New fuel and oil economy, combined with ample power for fast acceleration and sustained high speed are features of the new 1935 Reo self-shifter Flying Cloud, according to H. C. Berry of the Merced-Benz Motor Co.

"Such low fuel consumption in a machine of such power output," Merced-Benz has been accomplished by further refinement of the basic design. A seven-to-one compression ratio, without the slightest evidence of roughness of performance, plays an important part in the setting of high power output with low fuel consumption. Smooth performance with this unusually high compression is made possible by the design of the new aluminum cylinder head. Another factor, along with the contours of the combustion chambers and close equality of their volumes, is the effective use of the new down-draft carburetor and improved manifold.

"Washed" From Oil in Refining

The black, tarry mass that Dr. J. B. Rather, director of research of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., is holding in his right hand is the type of tarry stuff that the new Cleopatra process of oil refining "washes" from crude petroleum. A new kind of summer Mobiloil, made by the new process, has been announced.

Goodyear Service Retreads Pneumatic Tires for Cars, Trucks

Retreading of pneumatic tires for autos and trucks is now available to the public as a result of the installation of the most modern equipment by Goodyear Service at its new station, Twenty-second and Locust. C. M. Van Epps, manager, announces.

The retreading plant, laid out and operated on practically the same basis as a tire factory, is equipped with the latest curing facilities, following Goodyear's accepted methods of sectional retreading and retreading. Visitors will find this process of tire rebuilding interesting.

Pneumatic tires of every size, including the high pressure truck sizes, can now be retreaded. Factory trained experts are in charge of the new equipment.

"Exact requirements are absolutely necessary for retreading of automobile and truck tires," Van Epps says. These can be met only with expensive and especially designed equipment.

100-Mile-an-Hour Club Members Guests At Banquet May 25

One of the most unusual banquets in the history of automobile racing is scheduled May 25 at Indianapolis, five days prior to the annual 500-mile Decoration day race.

Guests will be a small group of drivers whose records on the Indianapolis track in the past five years have caused them to be chosen as charter members of the new Champion 100-Mile-an-Hour Club.

Membership is dependent upon a single achievement. The aspirant must have driven a full, official race at Indianapolis, without a moment's relief at the wheel, and he must have averaged 100 miles per hour or more for the five hours of the contest.

Of all the men who have driven the race, only 14 pilots, all young and some mere beginners, the 14, in the order of their average speeds, are: "Wild Bill" Cummings, 104.863; Mauri Rose, 104.697; Lou Meyer, 104.162; Fred Frame, 104.144; "Howdy" Wilcox, 103.88; Cliff Berger, 102.622; Wilbur Shaw, 101.795; Lou Moore, 101.599; Bob Carey, 101.363; Chet Gardner, 101.182; Russell Snowberger, 100.791; "Stubby" Stubblefield, 100.762; Billy Arnold, 100.448, and Dave Evans, 100.355.

Failure to Signal Cited as Cause of Traffic Accidents

One of the main contributing causes of traffic accidents is failure of many drivers to signal or to indicate to other drivers their intention to turn, stop or start, according to Robert C. Graham, executive vice-president of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, who has asked all Graham dealers and employees to co-operate in a comprehensive safety first campaign.

"A signal is not enough," Graham says. "A driver must make certain that the other drivers mentally register on the signal. The best traffic safety slogan I ever heard was—'Watch the other fellow.'"

Average Car Buyer.
Nearly two-thirds of all cars sold in the United States are bought by persons whose yearly incomes are less than $3000 and a third by those whose earnings are $2000 or less. More cars are sold to buyers with incomes of less than $1400 per year than those more than $7000 per year.

Rules for Tire Health, To Cut Costs, Given By Goodrich Expert

There are 12 simple rules for tire health, which, if followed, will cut the average motorist's tire bill anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent annually, writes K. D. Smith, technical superintendent of The B. F. Goodrich Co. tire division, in a recent issue of The American Legion Monthly. These rules are:

(1) Maintain recommended or rated air pressure at all times. The recommended pressure is a minimum below which tires should never be allowed to fall. Nor should pressure be kept much above this figure.

(2) Whenever you put on a new tire, or whenever a tire has been off the rim, do not start on a long drive with implicit faith that its air pressure is correct. A tire may lose several pounds of pressure immediately after it is put on the rim. Have it checked three or four miles down the road.

(3) Do not run a tire constantly on the same wheel. Shift your tires from wheel to wheel, which will produce even wear.

(4) Do not rely on the generally accepted theory that it is all right to run old tires on back wheels, because a rear tire blow-out is less dangerous than one in front. A rear tire blow-out is every bit as dangerous as one in front.

(5) Don't go around corners at high speeds. It wears tires faster than anything else.

(6) Except to prevent an accident, do not slam on the brakes. The most gradual braking possible is best for tires.

(7) Have your wheel alignment checked occasionally, rear as well as front.

(8) Look over your tires occasionally to see how they are getting along.

(9) Do not drive too fast on hot, dry roads. In extremely hot weather on dry roads, high speeds heat the tires, hastens deterioration.

(10) Start up gently, do not spin your wheels.

(11) Do not bump into curbs or run over them. Tires have not yet been perfected that will permit this kind of abuse without injury.

(12) If a car begins to steer queerly, slow down, pull off the road, and inspect all four tires carefully. Often this action comes when a tire is preparing to blow. Inspection may prevent an accident.

Dual Purpose Model

Carry all suburban model which is being introduced by the Chevrolet Motor Co. It can be converted readily from an eight-passenger sedan-like car into a commercial transportation unit.

Chevrolet Introduces Carryall Suburban For Double Purpose

The Chevrolet Motor Co. has announced introduction of an innovation in transportation units, the carryall suburban model, which can be used interchangeably for hauling merchandise or as a passenger vehicle seating eight persons.

Wide acceptance of the new type body is predicted, because of its versatile utility. It is designed to fit the needs of owners of small businesses who primarily require a commercial vehicle, but who will use it also as a family car; and to appeal to schools, camps, clubs, hotels, and other purchasers whose first need is for a passenger vehicle of greater capacity than regular models, for ready use also for hauling baggage, supplies, and other loads.

The carryall suburban body is mounted on the Chevrolet 112-inch wheelbase chassis equipped with 5.50-17 tires. The new model carries a list price of $680.

For commercial purposes, the body provides a load space 75 inches long, 52 inches wide, by 51 inches high. Loading is through the rear, which is provided with a horizontally divided closure, the lower half dropping to serve as a sturdy tail gate, and the top half opening upward, its weight carried by a spring-balanced safety support.

As a passenger vehicle, the car seats eight persons, the front and rear seats holding three each, the middle seat two. Entrance is by the right front door, past a tilting coach-type single seat and an aisle alongside the middle seat.

De Soto Airstream Convertible Coupe Ready for Retail Soon

An exceptionally rigid Airstream convertible coupe model with two frames instead of the usual one, is in production at the De Soto Motor Corporation factory. It will be available for retail delivery soon.

The two frames which combine to give the new model unusual strength are the regular X-type frame and a second frame built into the body. Heavy steel cross members brace and support this additional body frame at the points of greatest stress and the ribbed steel floor extending the length of the body provides further rigidity.

The body frame is mounted on top of the chassis frame and the two frames are bolted securely together to form a rigid assembly, with each independent frame lending strength to the other.

Two Big International Truck Factories Still Working at Capacity

The two big motor truck plants operated by International Harvester at Fort Wayne, Ind., and Springfield, O., says E. A. Dunsmoor, manager of the International Harvester Co.'s St. Louis motor truck branch, have been working at full capacity for months filling orders for the new streamlined International trucks.

The 14-ton International Model C-30, at $595 for the 133-inch wheelbase chassis at factory, is the lowest priced 1 1/2-ton six-cylinder truck chassis ever produced by the Harvester Co.

A sloping V-shaped radiator with polished stainless steel molding and aluminum finished grille, deeply crowned fenders, streamline hood and cowl all help to make the C-30 attractive. The truck comes on two wheelbases and is regularly supplied in a choice of four colors.

The high-compression engine with durable L-head and dome-type combustion chambers develops 78.5 brake horsepower. A wide variety of bodies adapts the C-30 to many specialized hauling requirements.

The line of International trucks consists of a variety of models and sizes ranging from half-ton delivery units to heavy-duty models in both four and six-wheel types for every hauling requirement. Then there is the Model M-2 door-to-door delivery truck which is very popular for retail service, particularly in the dairy industry for the delivery of milk. This model is built low for easy access, and the driver can operate the truck from house to house while standing up.

International Harvester motor truck shipments from the factories are about double what they were this time last year, Dunsmoor says.

Highways in United States.
There are approximately 3,000,000 miles of highway in the United States. It would require a motorist traveling at a rate of 10,000 miles yearly 300 years to cover all the roads.

Ford Co. to Spend $3,000,000 on New Glass-Making Plant

Additional Unit Will Have Capacity of 150,000 Square Feet Every 24 Hours.

Preparations are under way to install new manufacturing equipment in the Ford Motor Co. glass factory at the Rouge plant to make possible the resumption of glass manufacture next winter. The project's cost will approximate $3,000,000 and will increase to some $32,000,000 the cost of the present expansion program at the Rouge plant.

Work now in progress includes the construction of a new hot strip steel rolling mill, a new cold sheet steel finishing mill, modernization of the power plant into the largest high-pressure steam power plant in the world, installation of new furnaces and other equipment in the foundry for casting of alloy steel parts, modernization of one of the blast furnaces, and installation of equipment and other facilities throughout the plant.

Although Ford was the originator of the "continuous" process now general throughout the industry, glass manufacture has not been carried on at the Rouge plant for the last three years. The glass plant has been engaged in the production of laminated "safety" glass, utilizing glass supplied by outside manufacturers, with 1400 men employed. The original equipment is now being moved out to make way for the new.

Two Great Melting Furnaces. The new "big unit" will comprise two 600-foot lines including melting furnaces, annealing furnaces, grinding and polishing machines capable of producing 90-inch-wide ribbons of one-eighth-inch plate glass at the rate of 150,000 square feet every 24 hours. The installation will supply only part of the company's glass requirements.

Glass will be produced in two great 75-ton melting furnaces, one of which will heat glass in the line. Molten glass running from these will be rolled into continuous ribbons up to 90 inches wide, and then passed through annealing furnaces fitted with modern electric heaters before being cut into the desired lengths for grinding and polishing. Each line will have 60 grinders and 100 polishers.

One of the new melting furnaces and its companion annealing furnace, or "lehr," have already been installed, and preparations are under way for the installation of the second. One thousand additional workers will be employed when the installation is complete.

Foundation Piers Ready. Preliminaries of the present modernization program at the Ford glass plant were begun two years ago when the building was lengthened and a double row of heavy piers were sunk to a depth of 110 feet.

Thirteen hundred tons of steel required for the construction of the concrete foundations for the new machinery which will rest upon the piers are now under contract.

Times have occurred during the history of the Ford Motor Company when production has been regulated by the supply of plate glass obtainable for windshields and closed bodies. After the closed car was introduced, increase in the popularity of the sedan and coupe made the glass supply an important item, and the company decided to engage in glass manufacture.

The first step was the construction of a glass plant at Highland Park and the introduction of the "continuous" process, in which the glass was melted in tanks and cast in endless strips on a moving conveyor.

Construction of a glass factory at the Rouge plant to produce 12,000,000 square feet a year was next commenced. Another step was the purchase in 1923 of the plant and equipment of the Allegheny Plate Glass Co. at Glassboro, Pennsylvania, with a production of more than 6,000,000 square feet annually. Under Ford management with additional equipment that figure was considerably increased.

Pontiac Field Men

To Attend Two-Day Examination Sessions

More than 300 members of the field personnel of the Pontiac Motor Co. will meet with central office executives in a series of two-day conventions scheduled this month.

Oral and written examinations will be given at each meeting. Four will be held—one in each of the four great sales regions in which the United States is divided on the Pontiac domestic sales map.

The first meeting will be in New York City May 6-7, the second in Cincinnati May 9-10, the third in Chicago May 14-15, and the last in Oakland, Cal., May 21-22.

This projected program is the most extensive and intensive held by Pontiac under the present management. A. W. L. Gilpin, vice-president and general sales manager, who is directing the program and will attend all meetings, says that the object is to give every field man a complete and up-to-date understanding of every function of the sales division and of company policies.

To that end every departmental head in the sales division will take part in each program. Lectures and theatrical presentations of subjects under discussion will occupy an important place in the two-day programs.

Finance Firm Moves.

The Valley Finance Corporation has moved from 2911 Olive street to larger offices at 2847 Olive. Officers of the firm are A. G. Reed, president; Herbert Latta, and Otto Vogt. Austin Lieber is manager of the loan department.

New Convertible Sedan

New all-weather Ford V-8 convertible sedan; a dual purpose car for use as an open phaeton or a snug enclosed sedan. Photo shows the body type with top in place. The top, of tan-colored rubber interlined cloth, can be lowered and folded snugly, covered by a boot. The two center pillars are removable and may be stowed in the car. Converted in this fashion into a phaeton-type body, the car may be driven with the four-door windows lowered out of sight, or raised as protection against wind. The body has de luxe appointments. Seat cushions and backs are finished in leather or Bedford cord. The interior finish is in taupe throughout. All standard colors, including gunmetal, are available.

Says Lighter Colored Cars Less Likely To Be in Accidents

The general use of motor cars painted in light colors would greatly reduce the number of traffic accidents, says W. A. Lindberg, color engineer of the Chrysler Corporation.

Lindberg has made an informal check on motor car collisions, and has found that in a very large percentage of the cases one or both of the cars involved was painted black or a dark color. This is particularly true at night when the superior visibility of the lighter cars is more pronounced than in the daytime.

Chrysler cars come in a variety of stock colors, including some that are light enough to give the owner maximum protection against accidents caused by low visibility. Automobile paint now has been so perfected that the lighter colors are as durable and serviceable as the darker ones. Of course, anyone wishing a special paint job can have it at slight extra cost. In fact, one of the things the Chrysler people pride themselves on is being able to match any color sample sent in. They get some fearful and wonderful hues as samples, but they never fail to paint the car the desired color.

In addition to the value of the lighter colors in preventing accidents at night, they serve to accentuate the appearance of motion. A light colored car appears to be moving while a dark one seems static. For this reason the Chrysler Airflow, with its speedy lines, lends itself particularly well to paint of a bright color.

Chevrolet Foundry Breaks Its Record

The gray iron foundry of the Chevrolet Motor Co. set a new all-time record for a single day's pouring on April 19 with a total of 2306 tons. The previous high was 2152 tons, set a year ago. The new record was made with 12 cupolas in operation.

On four successive days, ending with the record day, an average of 2103 tons a day was poured. The total for the five-day week was 10,779 tons. The foundry makes castings for Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks, including cylinder blocks, pistons, and clutch and transmission housings. Parts are shipped to the company's several manufacturing plants to be machined and finished ready for dispatch to the 10 Chevrolet assembly plants.

Father Time Rides On.

The oldest licensed automobile driver in Pennsylvania, and one of the oldest in the United States, is Amos Ranck, aged 96, of Elverson. He was 86 years old when he first sat behind the steering wheel of a car and began fumbling with the "gadgets." Mr. Ranck still owns and drives the first car he ever bought—vintage of 1925.

New Gas Tax in New York. Automobile owners in New York State are now forced to pay a total of 5 cents for each gallon of gasoline they buy. The State receives 4 cents and the Federal Government 1 cent. In the past gasoline has been excised at 3 cents by the State, in which both the municipalities and the Government shared.

How to Use Brakes In Case Tire "Blows" Told by Driving Expert

Should a driver jam on the brakes when a blowout occurs? "Not at once," says Paul Faulkner, veteran test car driver for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Faulkner has driven test cars on which hundreds and hundreds of tires were purposely blown out with dynamite caps, automatic knives and by running them over plates studded with railway spikes, during development of the new Goodyear Lifeguard tube.

"The tendency of most drivers is to become excited when a blowout occurs, the driver should put his foot on the brake pedal, but should not jam the brakes on hard. He should apply the brakes easily, the steady application being continued as long as the car remains under control but slackening the pressure if the car continues to swerve."

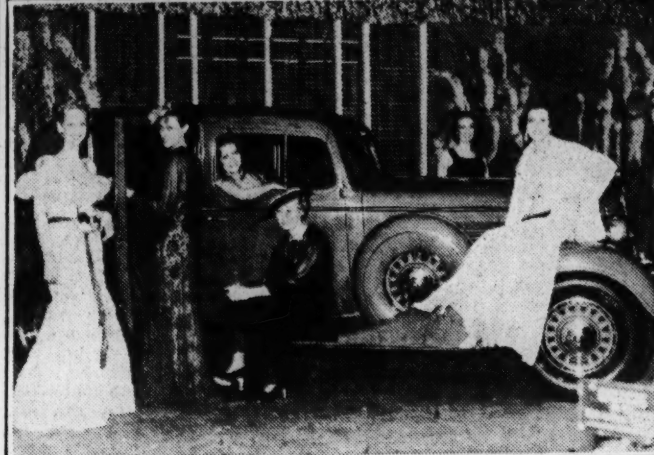

"This method of braking enables a driver to keep his car under control, and is a much better procedure than that of putting full force on the brakes the minute a blowout occurs."

More than 1300 types of construction were tested by Goodyear engineers before the Lifeguard tube was perfected, with Faulkner handling all the actual blowouts on cars. The Lifeguard tube is in reality a "double tube," joined together at the base. Air escapes from the outer chamber instantly when a blowout occurs, but can escape from the inner chamber only through a single tiny vent hole. This gives the driver several minutes in which to come to a stop under control without endangering himself, his car or the lives of other motorists.

Faulkner discovered that in driving cars on which ordinary tubes were blown out it was necessary for him to use all his skill to avoid serious accident, but says that with the Lifeguard tube the car kept straight down the highway without even swerving.

Maid-Chauffeurs in England. Maid-chauffeurs who do housework and also drive milady's car are finding employment in England.

At the General Motors Show

Six of the Spring evening costumes displayed by models in the Fashion Square Style Show held in connection with the General Motors Spring showing in the Mart building the past week. The car pictured is a Buick sedan finished in Runnymede green with whipcord upholstery. Its color scheme blended well with that of the background of the show, which was green orchid, gold and silver.

Racer Urges Two-Way Radio Communication Between Car and 'Pit'

There will be no frantic pit hands waving signals to Chester Gardner, the race driver, when he is striving May 30 for a share of the $100,000 purse in the 500-mile race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The race driver's eyes and ears, as the pit crew is called, simply will keep Chet's "Sampson Special" car tuned to the pit short wave radio and calmly advise him of his position, the track condition and what other drivers are doing. If Chet thinks he will need gas or a new tire, he can simply tell the boys to get them ready.

His Sampson Special, is again equipped with short wave, two-way radio communication and, as last year, Chet expects an orderly performance from the pit crew as a consequence. The radio already has gone through as many tests as a dozen radios would take in a dozen years and has come through a proven factor in racing.

If Gardner failed to finish in last year's 500-mile grind, it was not because his radio failed in an emergency. On the contrary, it operated with smooth efficiency, a performance his car was unable to match. However this year with his employer, Alden Sampson, he has effected a number of changes and improvements and expects to be a serious contender.

Rear-Engine Car Being Built. Production has started in Detroit, Mich., for the manufacture of a rear-engine automobile, with 100 horsepower. The car, shaped like a beetle, is built on a frame of alloy steel tube hoops. Back of the windshield, which is directly over the front wheels, is the driver's seat, adjustable to all angles. Next to that is a removable chair. Opposite the rear door is a cross seat, behind which has been placed a wide shelf. Two more chairs, removable from the floor, sit in the "interior." Forward is a table which fits into the wall.

Importance of New Spark Plugs Every 10,000 Miles Stressed

For the twelfth year, the Champion Spark Plug Co. is setting aside this week in which to call motorists' attention to the ever-important necessity of changing spark plugs every 10,000 miles.

Realizing the growing importance of correct spark-plug performance in engine efficiency, gas mileage and general motor-car performance, Champion calls upon its dealers, as an organized "vigilance committee," to enlist in the campaign against worn-out and wasteful spark plugs—which are called modern "highway robbers."

Change week was established 11 years ago, after prolonged search had revealed that spark plugs, after being used in 10,000 miles of driving, deteriorated to such an extent that power and speed, acceleration and economy were seriously impaired and noticeably lessened.

O. C. Rohde, Champion's chief engineer and a recognized authority on ignition, says, "The intense heat, chemical reactions and the tremendous mechanical shocks to which spark plugs are exposed inevitably take their toll, no matter how well made the plugs may be."

Traffic Spotting Successful. There are 500 traffic spotters in Pittsburgh, Pa. Their work has become so effective that the decline in highway fatalities has made the Pennsylvania city the least dangerous in the nation.

Plymouth Develops Dual Frame for Use in New Convertibles

Development of an entirely new type of automobile construction, to provide unusual strength and rigidity in convertible models, is announced by the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

The development is incorporated in the latest Plymouth convertible coupe, which will be in production soon.

An exclusive Chrysler Motors engineering development, the new-type construction involves the use of two frames instead of the usual one. The first frame is the regular chassis frame, while the second is a sub-frame built inside the convertible body.

In assembly, the convertible body with its inclosed sub-frame, is mounted on top of the regular chassis frame. Then the two frames are bolted securely together to create a construction as strong as the body-frame assembly of sedan models.

The regular X-type chassis frame is six inches in height, while the sub-frame, also of rigid X-type construction, is four inches high. The two, bolted together, form a steel girder.

Passengers in the new Plymouth convertible ride on top of this 10-

The engineers who developed the new "double-frame" construction say that it solves a major problem, involving the major connecting link between the cowl section and rear section, which is the body sill.

The new Plymouth convertible is a de luxe model, with interior upholstery of hand-buffed leather.

New Filling Station Co-operative Plan Devised by Tide Water

Regular Crews Sent Out to Visit Dealers and Help Them to Improve "Set-Ups."

A new idea in dealer co-operation and sales building has just been made a permanent set-up by the Tide Water Oil Co. in its Eastern division, after an experimental period of more than one year, and will be expanded to cover Tydol and Veedol dealers in this territory.

Units, each consisting of a 1½-ton Dodge paneled truck and a crew of three trained men, are used. The truck, carrying the title, "Display and Service Car," is painted in cream ivory with "Tydol-Veedol" and other lettering in brilliant red orange with blue-black shading.

On the truck's arrival at a dealer's place of business, two of the men open it up, and begin getting out the material to be used. Meanwhile the captain of the crew explains to the dealer the service. Generally a dealer gives permission for the work to proceed. The crew begins a complete clean-up and rearrangement of the premises.

The pump islands are cleaned and whitewashed. The entire place, including pit and other equipment, is cleaned. Display windows are completely rearranged with new displays. Where windows are not fitted for display, special shelves are built in by the crew and displays set up.

Gasoline pumps are cleaned, polished and simonized. Rubbish is removed and replaced with displays of Veedol motor oil and other Tide Water products. Rest rooms are cleaned, street curbsings whitewashed and other chores performed to make the station more attractive.

All is done on the basis of setting an example for the dealer to follow permanently.

The captain of the crew goes over the dealer's merchandising problems with him, checks up on his lubrication follow-up system, shows him how merchandising can be done at the pump, and explains Tide Water's service routine. He then takes the dealer or one of his men on a tour of solicitation throughout the neighborhood to prove to him that there are greater sales possibilities in his locality than he had realized.

La Salle Brakes

Take Advantage of Momentum Principle

The slight dip or "curtsy" made by the front end of an automobile during abrupt stops has been put to work by Cadillac-La Salle engineers to increase the power of the super-hydraulic brakes on the 1935 La Salle.

The "curtsy" they explain, is caused by the tendency of a car to "lean" forward as its momentum yields to the friction of the brakes. When the brakes are applied, this tendency to lean forward causes the front wheels to press the pavement more heavily than the rear. Thus the front wheels offer somewhat better traction.

In designing La Salle's brakes, the engineers took advantage of this fact. They applied 55 per cent of the braking effort to the front wheels exert all the road friction rear. Thus both front and rear wheels exert all the road friction that they can use without skidding.

Quick Facts About INTERNATIONAL 1½-Ton 6-Cylinder Model C-30

Six-cylinder engine—78.5 horsepower—hardened exhaust-valve seat inserts—full-floating rear axle—133 or 157-inch wheelbase—any desired body style—most economical in operation of all trucks in its class—lowest priced 1½-ton 6-cylinder model in International history. Other International sizes range from ½-ton to 10-ton with chassis prices as low as $400 f.o.b. factory.

Increased demand has greatly increased the production on the new International Model C-30, and the result is the lowest price that International Harvester has ever put on a 1½-ton, 6-cylinder truck.

That increased demand is the direct result of a combination of performance and economy in a modern truck that meets the widest range of hauling requirements.

See this new Model C-30 or any other International at our showroom. We'll be glad to show you the mechanical superiorities that have enabled hundreds of C-30 owners to operate their trucks at lower cost for a long lifetime of service.

Ma K'uei, General Ma's son.

Why Gen. Ma Chan-shan Can Still Defy His Japanese Enemies

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WITH the treacherous charms of a night club doll and through the soft heart—or head—of his 22-year-old son, the Japanese seem at last to have got ahead of General Ma Chan-shan, hero of Nonni River Bridge and Taitshar, insurgent war minister of Manchoukuo and its implacable enemy.

It was a long account they had to square with him. Item, his defense of Manchuria in 1931, which cost them many men, much property, $34,000,000 and a deal of international tut-tutting. Item, supplies and funds which he gained by capitulating—and promptly used against them. Item, damage to vanity inflicted when he turned up in Russia a few weeks after the Japanese, believing they had hunted him down, held his funeral—with full military honors.

And it's by no means certain that his last card has been played. With his son lured away by a charmer and cast into Japanese prison, Gen. Ma seemed licked, for precisely five minutes. And then he hauled a trump from his sleeve, and it seems logical to suspect that so cagy an old campaigner as Ma Chan-shan has others right where that one came from, and probably the full "49 packs" of the Bret Harle poem.

This most recent brush with "the enemy" concerned a little matter of $500,000 "silver," a mere quarter of a million in American currency. Japanese agents, he says, visited him not long ago in an attempt to recover that amount, turned over to him when he capitulated to the "new Manchuria" in 1932.

Gen. Ma declined to return the money. Almost bluntly—Oriental courtesy was never drawn so thin—he gave answer. What remained would be used, like that already spent, to destroy the power of Japan in China.

But thereafter, Gen. Ma guarded his steps. More than once, attempts were made to kidnap him. Again, acquaintances tried to get him into the Japanese concession at Tientsin. He was too wary for such transparent lures, but he could not guard his son.

Soon he was to have occasion to announce in a public advertisement, "Being occupied half of my life with military and national affairs, I have hitherto been negligent in attending to my private affairs. Since my retirement at Tientsin, I begin to notice that my son, Ma K'uei, has been seeking too much of pleasures and neglecting his work."

"Neglecting his work" wasn't the half of it. From his servants, he learned that the youth had fallen for Hu Man-li's advances in the Paris Cabaret, an Asahi road resort in the Japanese Concession. There this Chinese Mati Hari—much better looking than the original, by all accounts—entertained all comers, Japanese, Chinese, Russians, Americans, three dances for a dollar, "silver."

The old warrior stormed. Calling his son on the carpet, he said, "It is a conspiracy. I command you to forget the girl and remain outside the Japanese Concession. If you fall into Japanese power, I will disown you."

K'uei, brought up in the tradition of filial piety, quailed before his father's wrath. He would bury his infatuation under tons of work. And perhaps he would have done so, if Man-li had been content to let him go.

But she was not content. One day K'uei received a note breathing desolation, eagerness, impatience and a scent which stirred memories. Man-li would see him that night in the Asahi road cabaret. If Man-li did not see him, Man-li would surely die.

And there may have been some truth in it, for ladies who fail on such delicate missions have been known to encounter an incontinent temper in their masters.

Ma K'uei would not let her die. That night, fingering the perfumed note in his pocket, remembering the soft arms of Man-li, he slipped into the Japanese Concession. If shadowy figures followed, he did not see. He had dismissed his bodyguard. He was engrossed.

Hu Man-li, the night club charmer and spy.

As he stepped to the door of the Paris Cabaret, a lookout signaled. Ma K'uei was seized from behind, thrust in a curtained automobile, hurried away to a Japanese prison—and it seemed, for a while, as if the enemies of Ma Chan-shan had found a way to wound him at last.

He had outwitted them unflinchingly since, in a few exciting weeks of 1931, he rose from command of an obscure frontier garrison to defender of Manchuria. Round him gathered 20,000 men. Chinese in all parts of the world sent funds to aid him, but there were sticky fingers along the way, and he has charged that less than $50,000 of some millions donated, ever reached him.

Hence his army was no match for the much smaller but perfectly equipped and impeccably disciplined Japanese fighting machine. But it gave the invaders lots of trouble. And when, after the stubborn and brilliant defense of the Chinese finally crumpled and the Japanese marched unmolested into Taitshar, Gen. Ma and some thousands of his men had got clean away.

When Gen. Ma turned up again, he was not fighting as usual. He was war minister and member of the executive committee of the new "free state" under Emperor Pu-yi, and he was governor of Heilungkiang, the largest province. Song and poem had celebrated his defense of the North, but now lips curled as laundrymen in St. Louis and merchants in Singapore read of "the erstwhile hero of Taitshar."

The difference, it appears was $500,000 "silver." But in less than a month "revolts" against the new state were boiling up in Heilungkiang, and in less than two months it was known that Ma Chan-shan was off in the North, fighting the Japanese again, with Japanese funds and supplies.

Gen. Ma says that he capitulated only because he knew his cause was lost, he wanted the funds and supplies which were not forthcoming from the Chinese and he wanted to learn the secrets of the invaders. It is not clear if he had hopes of a self-sufficient Manchuria. But in that interval before he returned to his old calling as a wolf of the North to harry the "dwarf men from the Eastern Ocean," Shanghai had been invaded.

Once more in the open, Gen. Ma wired Pu-yi, advising the former Boy Emperor to ask the League of Nations for safe conduct out of Manchuria. He told his friends that Pu-yi, who met foreign newspaper men with the quiet assurance of the Chinese student, had grasped his hand and said, with tears in his eyes, "I am now in the mouth of the tiger. I can do nothing. Every day I want to die."

But Gen. Ma could not remain long in the open, for his enemies were determined to crush him. The new state was General Ma Chan-shan.

When His Son Was Trapped Through a Night Club Dancer and Thrown Into Prison He Simply Announced That the Father-Son Relationship Was Dissolved.

taking form, now in 1932, and elements so dangerous as he could not be tolerated by new-made rulers. More than once he was reported killed. Suddenly, on August 1, those vague reports took convincing substance.

The remnant of his army had been trapped between two Japanese divisions, just as the disastrous floods of that year began, far up in the Khinghan Mountains. Pursued by a Japanese battalion, the 800 ragged fighting men left to Ma Chan-shan crossed the Hailun River near the little village of Ankuchen. Hidden on the heights ahead lay a Japanese regiment.

As his men reached the bank, the hidden Japanese poured in a rifle fire that mowed down 200 of them. Ma fled eastward along the low ground, with Japanese firing from the heights on either side. In mid-afternoon they closed in, within effective rifle range.

Gen. Ma had been spotted, on horseback, wearing a raincoat over his general's uniform, riding among his men and urging them through the yellow mud. Rifle-men bent their fire on him. He toppled and lay still. The horse circled uncertainly. A rear guard held off the Japanese. The body was lifted to a stretcher and carried away. But the horse was caught, and in the saddle-bags were favorite possessions of Ma Chan-shan.

For a week the victors sought the body of the vanquished. Villagers pointed out a shallow grave. The body was exhumed and identified by Japanese and captive Chinese.

"He was a soldier!" said Commander-in-Chief Honjo of the Japanese, who had had cause to know it at the Nonni bridge. "I am sorry that he was led into fighting for the wrong cause."

THE body was cremated with Buddhist rites. In Japan, the "victors" told of "the heroic death of Ma Chan-shan." More, they took before their Emperor the captured trophies—Gen. Ma's three favorite opium pipes, richly inlaid with gold and mother of pearl; three military decorations, 22 gold armlets, two gold watches and 22 small bars of gold, with banknotes to make up a total of about $30,000.

Ma Chan-shan, they knew, had more than once dressed up a "double" to conceal his own objectives, after a custom of the war lords, but these were no worthless curios to plant on a "double."

Five days after the trophies were shown in Tokyo, four towns in western Manchuria had been captured in a new "revolt." The leader was Gen. Su Ping-wen, former subordinate of Gen. Ma—which in itself might well have excited the suspicions of the Japanese. As a matter of fact, he was harrying Japanese in Manchuria while the Emperor was admiring the spoils—and had been hard at it five days after his reported death.

But they refused to believe it, until, beaten back with Gen. Su, always fighting, he had slipped through their fingers again and across the Siberian frontier. It took days to convince them, even when the Russians officially identified him. And then they spared no diplomatic effort to recover him. But Russia refused to give him up, and he and his allies returned to China, by way of Paris and Berlin. In his home town of Tientsin he settled down to a "retirement" that now seems just another sort of struggle with his life-long enemies.

For a while, when he heard that his son had fallen into their hands, he seemed beaten. He bowed his head in his hands and wept. But in five minutes he arose, and in his eyes there was a cold and steady rage.

That night a coolie brought a note, "From your son." The warrior tore it to bits. "That," he said, "is my answer."

In the North China Star of the following day appeared the advertisement of which the first paragraph has already been quoted. The remainder was—

"Having repeatedly remonstrated with him and still been unable to obtain satisfaction in his conduct, I am convinced now it is futile to improve him. The mutual attachment to each other as father and son has been terminated. As I could not allow this situation to continue further unnoticed, I have decided to sever my relations with him as father and son."

"Whatever Ma K'uei does shall be of no interest to me."

It was a notice to his enemies. If they hoped to get at him through his son, and the boy was weak enough to play into their hands, then he had no son. They would have to find a better stratagem. And perhaps the last card was not yet played.

"These are the weapons they choose," said Gen. Ma Chan-shan. "But they are not yet through with me."

OVER the hills to Hurley comes a cavalcade of earth's afflicted, pilgrims to the shrine of "The Wizard of Oto," who has healing in his keeping, so the pilgrims say. There is no wizardry, the healer says, and no magic, nothing but the knowledge and skill that come of long study and long service, but there is no use of telling the pilgrims that. For has he not healed their diseases when there seemed no hope of healing? Nothing but a wizard could have done that. So, to them, Omar Palmer of Hurley is a wizard, and they come from far and near for his magic medicine. Not magic at all, in fact, but made magic by the pilgrims' faith.

They call him "The Wizard of Oto" because it was at Oto that the man was living, in a house by the side of the road, when the afflicted first found him and beat a path to his door, which was not a difficult thing to do, because Oto consists of Josh Maples' store and the farmhouse of W. B. Cox, and it is hidden among the Stone County hills. So to Hurley the man of healing came and to Hurley the pilgrims now come for his healing.

A man of mystery is the healer of Hurley. Out of nowhere he came. Only he does not name it Nowhere, but Everywhere, which is not less definite than Nowhere. He came out of the past that had known him, calling himself by a name that is not his own. Like a new "Shepherd of the Hills," he came, weary of the life that he had lived, looking for forgetfulness, but finding fame.

It was in December of 1931 that the man now known far and wide first came, unknown, to the valley of the James. He came driving over the hill roads into the valley in a light truck and, finding a place to his liking on the river bank near Oto, he pitched camp there. He had the valley pretty much to himself in midwinter and made few contacts with the neighbors on the nearby hills. They inferred that he was a man who had lost his place in the outside world and had come to where living was cheap.

Later he built a cabin and settled down for a long stay. He had had a nervous breakdown, he says, and had dropped everything somewhere, and he had found healing out here and he would stay.

He was 72 years old. He had been a doctor, he says, for more than 50 years. He did not intend to practice again. Then, one November day, a man who had heard that the camper by the river was a doctor, came telling him that his wife was very sick, with pneumonia, and he couldn't get a doctor to come from the big town over there, and wouldn't Palmer come. Palmer went and treated the woman. She recovered.

Early in December Palmer was at Josh Maples' store at Oto and the talk was about the woman who had been sick and was now well. The men sitting around said it was hard to get doctors to come into the hills. Palmer told them that he was not practicing any more, but if any of them needed a doctor, and could not get one, then he would do what he could for them. And that was how it began.

Later in that same month there came a flood in the James and Palmer's camp was washed away. He went to live at the Cox home at Oto.

They came to him there, the afflicted and those who thought they were afflicted, the hypochondriacs who never miss a pilgrimage, and they all went away and told how they had been helped and healed by "the doctor at Oto." And he hadn't charged them anything for treating them, only for the medicines that he mixed himself, and not as much for these as they would cost at the drug store. So the legend ran and spread and they began to call him "The Wizard of Oto," and the pilgrims came, wearing a path to the Oto shrine, where there was healing to be found—and it was free.

There was, and is, a reason for the free treatments. The "doctor" had no license to practice medicine in Missouri and has none now. There is a law against practicing medicine without a license if fees are charged. It would be a simple matter, if the man is qualified, to get a license, but he does not choose to do so. Granting his qualification, which does not seem to be seriously questioned, the suggested explanation of his refusal to apply for a license is his desire to guard his identity, and a fixed antipathy for the organized medical profession and all its works. And the medical profession, by and large, lashes at him with epithets which doctors handle with skill when dealing with the unorthodox of their kind. It is a merry feud, with the State health authorities trying now and then to do something about it. One gets the impression, when "Dr." Palmer talks about it, that he is having a lot of fun out of the controversy.

"I am the most cursed man you ever saw," he says, chuckling with deep enjoyment. "And the most praised," interposes T. H. Boyd, his chief assistant, beaming. Palmer stops chuckling and looks a little pained, as though he would say: "Oh, that!"

THE pilgrims who came had to be medicated according to their peculiar needs and the doctor needed much medicine of one sort and another. Lacking a supply, he sent into the hills natives who knew their herbs and they brought him the kinds that he needed. He showed Mrs. Cox how to cook them up. Wherefore, some said that "The Wizard of Oto" was a "herb doctor," with all of the awe that the term may inspire or the disdain that it may express, according to the point of view. For answer, Palmer says all doctors who use drugs are "herb doctors," as far as that goes, and laughs it off like that.

Farther and farther the legend went of the doctor of Oto, who "knew more than all the other doctors put together" and whose medicines, made from the herbs that grew on the hillsides, were magic for the ills of humankind, and from farther and farther came the patients. They overran the Cox farmhouse. They came in the night and waited for the day, for it was getting so that they had to take their turn, waiting hours for the privilege of a consultation. The doctor spent his days listening to the complaints of the sick and the pseudo sick and his nights visiting the bedridden far and near.

The doctor might have stayed on at Oto, where, in spite of difficulties, he had a following.

culty of access, he had all that he could do, but Oto was unable to take care of the crowds, so in the early spring, last year, "The Wizard of Oto" moved here and became the "Healer of Hurley," but he is still called "The Wizard of Oto" by many who ascribe wizardry to his healing.

Here on the bank of Spring Creek he has established himself with a consultation room, a reception room that would hold 50 persons, a pharmacy, space for secretaries, and a restaurant where pilgrims may eat.

Here the routine of the clinic was systematized. Palmer had been trying to see all who came. One day there had been 137. A rule was adopted that he would see only 50 each day. The pilgrims were registered up to 50 and took their turns in the order in which they had registered. All who came after the 50 had been registered were turned away and told to come another day.

That is the system now. The office is opened at 5 a. m. for registration of the day's patients. Usually there is a crowd waiting. They begin arriving shortly after midnight. The reception room door is left open and the room lighted and in cool weather there is a fire in the stove.

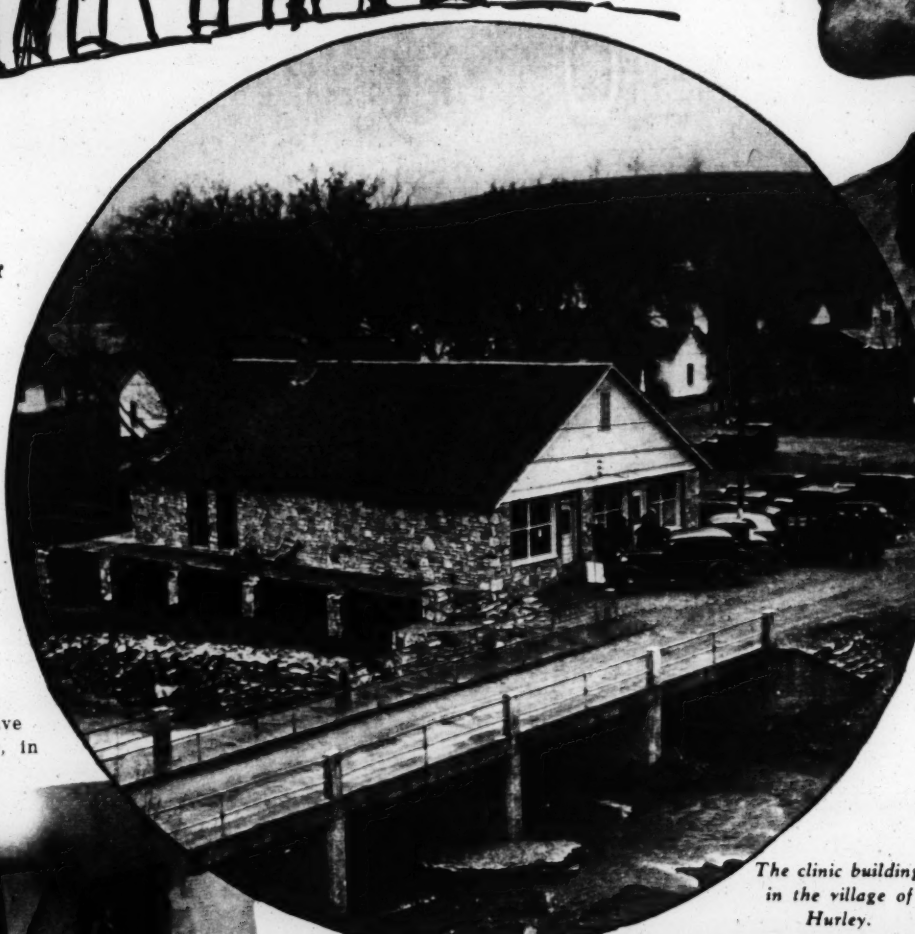

The patients sit or lie on the benches until Boyd comes at 5 o'clock and opens the book for the day's registration, cautioning the women not to quarrel about priority in arrival at the reception room. It is not necessary to caution the men. It is the women, too, who complain about the long hours of waiting.

Women complain sometimes to Palmer, but they do not gain anything by it. He has his rules and he lives up to them. What is more, he doesn't like for anybody to find fault with them. There was a woman one day who thought she was sick. She said, when she was admitted after a long wait, that she had been pushed out of her turn. She was rather saucy about it. She, a sick woman, to be treated like that. "You're not a damn bit better than anybody else," said the doctor. "And," he added, by way of diagnosis, "there's nothing the matter with you but your temper."

No patients are received on Sunday. A man who did not know the rule came one Sunday and found the reception room closed. He went into the restaurant and was told that the doctor would not see him that day.

He was not a wizard and he was not a herb doctor, and there was no psychology about it and no faith. He just treated people like other doctors do, diagnosing their ailments and giving them medicines. If there was one thing in which he might say he was better than other doctors, it was in his analysis tests. He treated everything that came along if there was a chance, and if there was no chance he told the patient so. Most of his patients had failed to obtain relief elsewhere and were chronic cases, hopeless or semi-hopeless.

Many of the patients who crowded the doctor's reception room that day did not look like hopeless cases, but they may have been worse off than they looked.

Up to the first of this year, says Boyd, the doctor had treated between 16,000 and 17,000 patients and had written 75,000 individual prescriptions, which were filled in his little pharmacy. There is a nominal charge for the medicines, he says, if patients can pay. If they can't pay it is all right, and about 55 per cent say they can't pay. The doctor pays $200 a week for the herbs which the natives bring in. He has a full-time staff of seven persons. The clinic, Boyd says, fell several thousand dollars short of meeting expenses last year. The deficit, he supposes, is made up by Palmer out of his own funds.

Attempts of the State authorities to put a stop to Palmer's activities have failed. He was arrested in July, 1933, on the charge of practicing without a license. It could not be shown that he had accepted a fee, so he was discharged. Then an attempt was made to amend the law as to stop the sale of medicines by him. The proposed amendments were attacked on the radio and by petitions signed by nearly 25,000 names, declaring that the doctor was "doing a wonderful evangelistic work," and the amendment was killed in committee.

The doctor's evangelism is not confined to curing human ills, according to Boyd, who considers his clinic chief the most wonderful man he has ever seen. He says the doctor is helpful in other ways.

THERE was a man who had two mules and needed both of them, but one died. He was distressed about it and told Dr. Palmer. The doctor's erudition did not extend to mules. He asked what a new mule cost and was told that a very good one could be bought for about $165. "All right," he said, "here's the money. Go and buy another dam mule."

Through it all Dr. Palmer guards well the secret of his past. Beyond the rather indefinite statement that he was born at sea and has lived in many lands, he does not identify himself. Those nearest to him say they do not know any more than anybody else about who and what he was before he came to Oto. They are proud to be in his entourage and do not ask his confidences. Once during the legislative fight, Palmer felt that Boyd, who was leading the fight, should be told something of his patron's past. But Boyd protested that he did not want to know and Palmer did not tell him.

Though the doctor is undeniably a very busy man, he found time early last year for romance. He wooed and won Miss June Powell of Aurora, who is about 30 years old, and they have a girl baby, born in January.

It was Sunday when this writer paid a second visit to Hurley. The clinic was closed, but the cafe was open. Palmer, bareheaded as always, breezed in.

"Gimme some cigarettes," he said to Mrs. Boyd, behind the counter, and threw down a quarter. Then he decided that he wanted a cup of coffee and parted with a nickel for that. He talked a little more about his work and was off to visit his shut-in patients, over the hills from Hurley.

THE valley of the Arkansas River in Colorado is a broad, many-scarred floor between ranges of snowy peaks rising in a 14,000-foot wall around it. Set into this background is the battered skeleton town of Leadville, once the setting for riotous and tawdry splendor, when hundreds of miners and prospectors walked the streets, when millionaires sat at the gambling tables. Some $500,000,000 in ore have been drawn from its rock-ribbed surrounding hills and panned from the black sand of its stream beds. But its barbarian magnificence is no more and the mines that are still in operation there go about their business with simple matter-of-factness.

Symbolical of the end of all that Leadville has been was the death one night recently of the widow of a man who did more than anyone else to make it what it once was. She was a scrawny crone of 72, still dressed in the rags of what was once the most magnificent wardrobe west of the Mississippi. Around her in the tiny shanty on Fryer Hill where she was frozen to death were 17 iron trunks stored with the remnants of a fabulous collection of silver and gold plate, with baby clothes and a white satin wedding dress that cost $7000—with a dress sword—mementos that might, had she been willing to part with them, have dragged on for a few more years the dreary life of the old woman who treasured them. All the money that was found there was a couple of dollar bills and a few odd coins. Those who looked upon that tragic sight thought it just as well her nightmare had ended.

The fallen fortunes of the woman who was Elizabeth McCourt Doe Tabor were one tragedy that was losing its force in a tedious fifth act. The spectacular first scenes are no longer convincing. What she has been going through recently was a terrible mistake, picked out for the curious by such notes as this one, scrawled on an old calendar: "Lots of devils all over the cabin. Oh, terrible. No food left. On my hands and knees. Need bread. Cold. Suffering alone. Awful blizzard. I saw purple near the ceiling."

Some weeks before the end, however, a book was published, "The Tabor, A Footnote of Western History," by author, Lewis Cass Gandy, was the son of a man who had known Horace A. W. Tabor long before that fabulous pioneer had assumed the gigantic proportions that have made his name a legend.

Tabor was the son of the struggling farmer of a stony homestead in Vermont. He was born in a clapboard farmhouse his father had built with his own hands, and was brought up on back-breaking labor, with which he was early dissatisfied. So he became a wandering stonecutter, fell in love with the pretty daughter of a contractor at Augusta, Maine; decided to go West to seek his fortune.

The Territory of Kansas, when Tabor went out there, was America's wildest frontier. The country was shimmering with the bitterness that was going to boil over and be a civil war. Advocates of slavery in Missouri encouraged the hotheads on the border to cross into Kansas and pillage and burn, hoping to terrorize the inhabitants into voting to legalize slavery. They were met by such determined "Free Soilers" as John Brown and his sons, and H. A. W. Tabor. After a year in a floorless cabin, living on corn ground in a coffee mill, farming his prairie fields, Tabor—a handsome youngster of 25—was elected as a representative to the first Kansas Free State Legislature. He owned nothing more than his cabin, his rags and his rifle. Most of his time was spent fighting and freebooting in one of the bitterest little campaigns of American history. When he was able to pick up a little money by his trade, he went to Maine and was married to Augusta Pierce, a courageous and industrious young woman, without whose part in it none of the rest of this story might have been enacted.

THE life this first Mrs. Tabor led on the Kansas frontier was something few brides of today could imagine. Frightened and homesick after the trip (by rickety railroads, river boats, ox-cart) from her cozy New England home, she was faced with a wretched little cabin that leaked rain and rattlesnakes, had to live through drouth, had to bear a child miles from the nearest settlement, had to help her husband survive in a year of financial panic. After a couple of years of this, the Tabor were willing to risk the terrors of the desert to improve their fortune in the fabled country on the edge of the Rockies.

On April 5, 1859, they started off in a wagon loaded with what little they could afford in the way of supplies, and accompanied by their infant son, Maxey, and two of Tabor's dearest friends, Sam Kellogg and Nathaniel Maxey. Two oxen and their own strong legs were the only means of propulsion through country barren and infested by hostile Indians.

Tabor was equal to the awful trials of the trip. He was filled with an overpowering optimism, was as brave as any pioneer and more intelligent than most. Many who started on that trek failed to show up at the other side—some survived only by cannibalism. Before the Tabor party had succeeded in reaching Denver they knew what thirst and starvation meant. Their ordeal lasted 72 days and they were half dead when it was over.

However trying the Tabor's first months of married life had been, the coming years were to be often as difficult, usually even more discouraging. Their first venture, to Payne's Bar, where gold had been discovered shortly before they reached Denver, was begun by pushing and snubbing their ox-cart over perpendicular trails no wheels had touched before. During that summer Mrs. Tabor kept a store and restaurant while the three men prospected. Tabor staked a fair claim before long, but a wily old-timer persuaded him to return to Denver before winter. When he became suspicious, returned and saw he'd been duped, he carelessly (or generously) refrained from resorting to the frontier law that decreed sudden death to claim jumpers, left the old man working his own claim and went quietly back to Denver. Mrs. Tabor was furious.

There were numerous other ventures at storekeeping and prospecting after that. Mrs. Tabor became known throughout the camps for her fine cooking; she remained an immaculate housewife even when living in a wagon. They were doomed—like most others—to be disappointed in their gold seeking.

But it was tales of new-found gold that lured the Tabor menage (Maxey and Kellogg were still of the party) into South Park before the snow was out of the passes in the spring of 1860. It was February when they started this highly perilous trek over mountains never before explored. Each night they could look back and see their breakfast campfire smoldering below them. They were often in desperate danger from starvation and swollen streams. Just when they seemed at the end of their rope, they came up with some other prospectors who were in almost equally bad straits. But at the blackest moment, when they had to kill the oxen which had brought them from Kansas, gold was discovered. It was the famous strike of California Gulch.

Tabor, however, was still dogged by hard luck. Though he was one of the first on the spot, the claim he selected for himself proved one of the poorest in the section. A modicum of luck would have made him a rich man.

During the 17 ensuing years, therefore, the Tabor continued to live the life of camp storekeepers. Mrs. Tabor became postmistress of the camp in Arkansas Valley. Both of them became popular and prominent in the flotsam community. During the Civil War, Tabor, who would have given a lot to have joined up with the Unionists, was held back by his wife, whose tongue became sharper as the years went on. Fortunately for both of them, they continued to live in the Arkansas Valley region until after W. H. Stevens and A. B. Wood proved that large deposits of silver-bearing carbonate of lead were the source of the district's real wealth.

BY then the Leadville section was ripe to boom. The town was founded at the time of Stevens' and Wood's discovery in 1878. Tabor was elected its first Mayor. His store prospered. It seemed that after 20 years of scrapping and optimistic drudgery, he would be rewarded with a moderately successful old age.

It was only about a year after the Leadville development started that all this was to change. Tabor was almost 50 when his windfall came—in the persons of August Rische, a German shoemaker who had fought during the Civil War in Missouri; and George Hook, who had worked in Pittsburgh smelters. It was probably as much owing to his sentimentality about veterans in the war he had longed to join as to any faith in these adventurers that Tabor agreed to grubstake them. It was far from the first of such gambling ventures, and Tabor's

Sometime in May, 1878, Rische and Hook came rushing into Tabor's store with their first samples. Leaving his wife and young Maxey Tabor to keep shop, the Mayor of Leadville hurried back with them, armed with pick and shovel. By July the mine, which they named the Little Pittsburgh, was netting them about $50,000 a month. Hook retired with a small fortune, to spend the rest of his life in peace. Tabor embarked on a career that is one of the epics of the West.

Endowed with considerable capital, he began to buy mining property as fast as he was able. After a year he sold some of this for $1,000,000, bought a half interest in the National Bank in Denver and, what proved to be his finest investment, the Matchless Mine, near the Little Pittsburgh. For years Tabor was able to take ore out of the Matchless Mine, sometimes as much as $80,000 a month. He was seldom awindled in his buying, and on one occasion, when he purchased a mine (the Chrysolite) that had been "salted" with some of his own ore, he was able, by sinking a deeper shaft, to turn the supposed swindle into a profitable venture. He invested in real estate in Denver, Leadville, Chicago, in smelters, toll roads, irrigation canals, railroads. Later he bought "cooper" land in Texas, grazing land in Southern Colorado, a huge land concession in Honduras.

No one, including Tabor himself, had any idea how wealthy he became. Estimates run from five to 15 millions, the latter figure probably being somewhat closer to the truth. How he succeeded in spending that much in a semi-frontier country during 15 years, is a mystery. Generosity, splurging, politics, speculation, even these together with the demonization of silver and the panic in 1893.

Before all this happened, Tabor broke with his heroic, if somewhat shrewish wife. Belated wild oats, the indulgences of a man who had known too much privation, caused him to become as well known in Denver's "parlor houses" as in Leadville mines. His riotous spending and pioneer crudities brought down on him the scornful sarcasm of the editor of the Denver Tribune—an imaginative young man named Eugene Field. His divorce from Augusta Tabor and his subsequent marriage to Elizabeth McCourt, divorced wife of a young man named Harvey Doe, brought general disapproval and ended his ill-advised excursion into politics.

"Baby" Doe, as she was called, came from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and had become famous throughout Colorado for her charm and beauty. She was only 20 when she went with Tabor, who had bought himself first a term as Lieutenant-Governor, then a month in a vacated seat in the United States Senate, to Washington. They were secretly married in St. Louis before Tabor's divorce was made legal, then again in the Willard Hotel, Washington, in the presence of President Arthur.

His gifts to Denver and Leadville were on an elaborate scale. Most notable was the Tabor Opera House in Denver, a theater which billed almost every stage celebrity of the day. Mrs. Tabor (Baby Doe) entertained nearly all of them in the drawing room of the palatial Victorian house her husband built for her. Her salon was the envy of all the women who tried unsuccessfully to ostracize her. And Tabor affected equal grandeur even in Leadville, where his various companies of militia were so resplendent that when the Captain of the Tabor Light Cavalry called at a friend's house and was met at the door by the friend's little daughter, the child answered her mother's question as to who had knocked: "I don't know, but I think it's God."

SUCH glory lasted until the eve of the panic, when the mines began to decrease their output while their owner continued his extravagance unabated. Tabor kept no liquid assets; when the crash came it wiped him out overnight; within a few years he was down in the mines, trying to recover his fortune with a pick and shovel. It was a terrible blow to his wife and two daughters, Elizabeth Bonduel Lillie and Rose Mary Echo Silver Dollar Tabor, children of the prosperous years. But Baby Doe, despite all predictions to the contrary, stayed faithfully beside her aging husband and kept up his obdurate optimism. And there was a brief time during the last year of his life, when he seemed likely to regain contentment. Former political opponents got him an appointment as Postmaster of Denver.

But that was Tabor's afterglow. He died in 1899, murmuring to his lovely wife, "Hold on to the Matchless. Never let it go." She never did. She moved to the little shanty beside the once-famous mine and lived there, or in a Denver rooming house, for 36 years, with her 17 trunks of fading finery. She never ceased to believe that some day, somehow, yet unexplained riches could be recovered from the Matchless. Right of homestead kept the company that foreclosed the property from evicting her when, after ceaseless struggle, she lost title to it in 1929. She kept a shotgun beside her to warn off unwelcome visitors.

The first Mrs. Tabor died wealthy. Her son, Maxey, followed her a few years ago. The beautiful Silver Dollar was accidentally scalded to death in Chicago in 1925. And Elizabeth, the elder daughter, is now the only survivor. She was married in Milwaukee a few years after Tabor's death and is now said to be living in Illinois.

THERE is in St. Louis a man who has been for 18 years the chief financial officer of a growing business, which has a balance sheet of $264,000,000 and an annual turnover of about $30,000,000.

He has done his work to the conspicuous satisfaction of his employers and built up an enviable reputation. His salary all this time has been $8000 a year—less a 10 per cent cut for a couple of years—and with no lagnappe and few appreciable perquisites.

He is Louis Nolte, Comptroller of the City of St. Louis, which is a bigger business enterprise than most of the citizens, who are its owners, realize.

Since April 16 he has been the only Republican official left in the municipal Government, which otherwise has completely changed its political complexion since the New Deal landslide began three years ago. On the desk of his private office at City Hall, tucked away in a suite on the second floor, east, is a good-sized image of an elephant—last symbol of the G. O. P. in a building once overrun with pachyderms triumphant. A veteran newspaper reporter, who happens to be a Democrat, gave it to him out of real friendship.

In the adjoining office of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, under a glass tabletop, are yellowing press clippings, telling of municipal economies in various places, none tells of an increase in expenditures. The Comptroller's colleagues in this board, who have been three Mayors and three aldermanic presidents, have seen those clippings through the years, with a psychological effect which may be imagined.

On the wall of the private sanctum is the framed original of a Post-Dispatch cartoon by D. R. Fitzpatrick, entitled "Portrait of a City Hall Nobleman." It was presented to him by Charles H. Daves in a little ceremony, in behalf of a friend. Nolte was a bit put out about it at first but grew to like it. The drawing pictured him in medieval attire, with a ruff, fist clamped tightly around a moneybag. The cartoon was inspired by the Comptroller's vigorous complaint over the rather large price paid by the City Art Museum out of its specially set-up tax funds for the oil portrait of a nobleman by El Greco, the famous painter.

"Louie" Nolte, like most of us, sometimes is short of manner, but usually is genial and smiling. The casual visitor who may be ushered to the inner office, if his business deserves it, generally does not linger long and may wonder on reaching the corridor how he departed so quickly, but he won't resent the fact that the

Turning the Eugene Field Home Into a Museum

LITTLE happened in St. Louis that year after the double catastrophes of the year before. St. Louis was rebuilding the 15 blocks laid waste by the great fire and, after the cholera, had established a Board of Health and begun the construction of sewers.

A tax—5 mills on the $100—had just been voted for public schools. The Pacific Railroad had been incorporated, the Bryan Mullanphy Fund for Travelers' Aid had been established and a Temperance Society had been organized.

The city, nearing the end of the great fur-trading era and entering the heyday of the Mississippi packet boat—variously called "floating palace" and "gilded hell"—had grown from 16,469 population to 77,860 in 10 years. Traders from Philadelphia and frontiersmen from "the Dark and Bloody Ground"—Kentucky—had mingled with the old French villagers, and patriotic Germans were coming in after their revolution of 1848 to give the town some of its staunchest elements, a hearty interest in good living, its once world-famous philosophical movement and one of its most delightful cookbooks.

But in 1850, after the disasters of 1849, there was a lull. Perhaps the most important event of the year was one that St. Louis has begun to commemorate in a fashion which in the last few weeks has elicited support from unexpected quarters, as far off as New England. This was the birth of Eugene Field, whose childhood home, 634 South Broadway, after years of decay, is being refitted and refurnished as a Eugene Field Museum.

Oddly enough, there is a little doubt of the date and more about the place of this outstanding event of 1850. Field himself, in a little biographical sketch which he called "The Confession," said the day was Sept. 3, 1850.

A bronze tablet naming the South Broadway house as his birthplace was unveiled there in 1902 with a ceremony attended by Mark Twain on his last visit to Missouri. But a brother wrote to the Post-Dispatch shortly thereafter, that their father told him the poet was born on Collins street, between Franklin avenue and Car street. But Field himself cherished the South Broadway house as his childhood home—revisiting it, he shaved a piece from a banister for a souvenir—and as his childhood home it has been saved from destruction.

Until its destruction was threatened, the only monuments to Field in St. Louis were the plaque, the Eugene Field School and a wealth of frequently ribald pressroom anecdotes which grew out of his six years' service on St. Louis newspapers. For a century the South Broadway site belonged to the Board of Education. The buildings—a fine residence "block" when the Fields lived there, then boarding houses of increasing shabbiness and finally empty and dilapidated—were eating up a leaseholder in city's financial boss has bowed him away. The visitor with something of importance to tell or hear may be there a long time. Tall and heavy-set, with close-cropped gray hair, ruddy cheeks and pleasing features, Nolte is customarily soft but precise in speech, and the soul of politeness. Arouse his ire and he is a different person. He has been known to pursue drivers of city machines in his own automobile when he thought they were going too fast, and give them a piece of his mind. He was interested not only in public safety, but in possible claims against the public treasury and in the wear and tear on public motors. Even ambulance drivers have heard from the Comptroller when he thought their haste unjustified. Years ago he drove after a citizen who fled from the scene of an accident and escorted him to a police station.

that believes in giving the best that is in him and demanding the best of others without regard to political considerations. He has, in the exercise of his broad powers under the Charter, found and stopped various practices that cheated or tended to cheat the city. When the Aldermen were voting big appropriations freely in his first term he served notice that he would not recognize the allowances unless cash actually was on hand to meet each in full. He was within his rights and he won out.

A check by Nolte on the cost of cable for electric street lighting was the forerunner of an inquiry into the lighting contract by the Post-Dispatch in 1929, which showed an overcharge of about $175,000 had been made. "I have always believed the city was gyped on those contracts and I still think so," he said. When condemnation commissioners allowed high prices for land desired for the Hall's Ferry Circle. Nolte called the awards a "damned outrage." Although Henry W. Kiel and Nolte always were good friends, Kiel, as Mayor, used to play a little game with Nolte. People would ask Kiel for favors involving city expenditures. The Mayor would assent readily, thereby losing no friends, but he would add, "you'll have to see Louie Nolte, too." Nolte would say "no," starting his reputation as the champion No-man of City Hall, but somehow he would not make enemies.

Kiel's successor, Victor J. Miller, with a contemptuous note in his voice, used to refer to the Comptroller as "that fellow at the other end of the hall," but his dependence on Nolte grew as time passed. Mayor Dickmann, in office for the last two years, has gotten along amicably with Nolte, though of opposite political faith. Two years ago Nolte presented a statement to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment showing that if a refunding program was to be avoided the tax rate would have to be raised from 39 to 56 cents on the $100 valuation. This was due to the fact that funds had been seriously depleted due to two 10 per cent cuts in assessed valuation and to mounting tax delinquencies. Dickmann and Walter J. G. Neun (Republican), who retired recently as aldermanic president, outvoted the Comptroller and the rate was not changed. This condition did not improve and the following year the sinking fund had been depleted to such an extent that the Bureau of Municipal Research showed that a 41-cent tax increase would have been necessary to avoid refunding. The rate was not increased and a refunding program is now in operation. Nolte opposed last year's $16,100,000 improvement bond issue as unsound financially.

One of the biggest hornet's nests Nolte ever poked into concerned the employment of several visiting nurses, whose salary was only a drop in the payroll bucket. Public indignation was aroused over his "tight-fistedness," but he felt that his authority was being challenged in the effort to put them to work without specific appropriation and he stuck to his position.

In the past, Nolte has defended the practice of employing a municipal lobbyist to represent the Board of Estimate during the sessions of the Legislature. He felt that the general tendency of State legislators to pass laws placing heavy financial burdens on the large cities needed careful watching. He has general supervision of the city's property and, with the Mayor after the passage of ordinances, negotiates the purchase and sale of the city's real estate. He is head of the Department of Finance, with general supervision over all offices handling city money. He does not take vacations, but in good weather usually stays away from the office one day a week to putter around his farm in the northern end of the county. A lifelong North Sider, his home is at 1129 Penrose street.

Born in St. Louis of German ancestry 63 years ago, circumstances did not give him any serious struggles with life as a youth. His father was a grocer. He attended public school, a military school and a business college and started his career as messenger for a title examining concern. He became an examiner and at the age of 24 entered the real estate business.

As a young man his first contact with politics as it used to be played here occurred when he served as an election judge at the request of a friend seeking office. He watched the ballot box zealously but while taking it to City Hall at night he was assaulted and robbed of the ballots.

Induced to run for Sheriff in 1907, he was elected for a two-year term, then re-elected for a four-year term, leading the Republican ticket. The Republicans needed a good campaigner to defeat James Y. Player (Democrat) for Comptroller in 1917 and chose Nolte.

NOLTE ran, but did not lead the ticket. Re-elected four times since, he has been the biggest vote-getter on each occasion. He even triumphed in the Democratic landslide that made Barney Dickmann Mayor in 1933. In the Republican primaries of 1925, 1929 and 1933 he was unopposed for the nomination. In the election of 1929 his only opponent was a Socialist-Labor party nominee.

Few speeches are made by this man, who prefers to deal in figures. He is plainly not happy when the exigencies of a campaign force him to deliver one of his rare addresses, yet he handles himself well on the platform. He consented to make a brief inaugural address before a throng at City Hall when the Democrats took command two years ago.

The late Felix Gunn, Deputy Comptroller, who was an invaluable aid, was a Democrat, as have been some other employees retained by Nolte. He believes in hiring men who know their jobs and leaving them alone. A natural conservative, he has been opposed to municipal ownership of utilities. He is a man of independent means, still interested in the real estate business.

Last November, the third annual St. Louis Award, for civic accomplishment, was bestowed on Nolte, for his refusal to accede to issuance of bonds until funds were available to support them. It was typical of the Comptroller that his chief gratification was that his mother, who died a short time later, could see him receive the honor, and that his use of the $1000 award was to give it to charity.

Restored and Refurnished, It Will Become Repository of a Collection of Fieldiana Which Has Already Begun.

taxes, and he sought to destroy them. Announcement in the Post-Dispatch, with editorial comment, brought immediate response. The board, which had given permission to destroy the building, reconsidered. James P. Henry and Carl P. Daniel offered to restore it. The board unanimously accepted their offer. A civic committee was formed and placed in charge. School-children's pennies made up a fund of more than $900. From admirers of Field in Amherst, St. Paul, Chicago, poured in letters of approval and offers to help.

Daniel and Henry, who heads the committee, paid $700 to put the staunch old building in shape, and $800 of the children's fund restored the interior. Now the committee plans to make a walled old-fashioned garden, and to refurnish the house with Fieldiana and furniture of the period, of little money value just now, but carrying the genuine flavor of the time. Especially it is seeking an oil portrait, believed to be in the hands of a resident of Festus or Crystal City, near St. Louis.

Many such gifts have been offered, and two already are in the possession of the committee. One is a Sheffield candle-snuffer and tray, made about 1810, given by Cyril Daldy, and the other is a Eugene Field scrapbook, including a number of original manuscripts, made by the late W. L. Thomas, editor of a one-time St. Louis periodical where some of Field's work was first published. The scrapbook was bought at auction for $180 by a group including Superintendent of Schools Gerling, Chairman Henry of the committee, Walter M. Crunden, Joseph Pulitzer and the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

It affords brilliant and intimate bits on Field, on what he thought and what he hoped of his work, and particularly on his social life, for it was a social age and he was a particularly social man. In point are the myriad reportorial legends, often about drink, generally about debt and always about talk.

There is the story about the bar bill, probably a myth, for its locale varies with every telling. In the scrapbook, it happened at Gaston's bar in Kansas City. Field owed $250, but had brought in so much trade that Gaston settled and cleared the slate for $2.50—of which Field borrowed 50 cents from a friend and $2 from Gaston. And having thus settled the bill, he had a drink on the house!

Field, who was a total loss as a reporter but a knockout as an editorial paragrapher on the St. Louis Journal, became managing editor of the Kansas City Times. One may learn from the scrapbook that Thomas McNabb, composing room foreman, was susceptible to hangovers. And so Field daily sent up an item which McNabb knew, would go into print unless he got to work on time and "killed" it. The item was:

of "Little Boy Blue" and "Wynken, Blynken and Nod" had "no particular desire to shine as a writer for small children; I want to be able to write of small things in such a way as to please grown people—that is all."

But in a letter dated May 7, 1885, he explains, "It is my ambition to make a reputation as a writer of purely fanciful and homely literature. There are plenty of people to write about bear hunts and lion chases; I prefer to hang around the fireside where the heart always loves to cling."

The handwriting itself has something to tell. Graphologists would say it denotes clear thought; for, though it is so fine that five small pages of Field manuscripts make seven typed pages of letterhead size, the lines are meticulously spaced and the writing completely legible.

THE exigencies of his craft had something to do with that, for his handwriting went direct to the printers. There was a time, following a few gay and costly months abroad, when he made his "5" in a continuous line and crossed his "7" after the European manner, but he had outgrown that when he wrote these letters to Thomas, after he had gone to the Chicago Daily News.

In the scrapbook is a copy of the "Confession," disclosing such personal bits as, "I should like to have the privilege of voting extended to women," and "I do not like ALL children." The Field collection given by the late W. K. Bixby to Washington University library—which may be sought for loan exhibition in the Field Museum—includes another copy of the "Confession," and on that copy Field has inserted, in his precise script—

"I do not care particularly for so-called literary people; they make me weary."

The Spread of Underground Humor in Germany

How Contraband Jokes Are Used to Relieve the Feelings of the People Now That Ordinary Criticism Has Been Outlawed by Hitler.

This cover is an exact copy of the Storm Troopers' Song Book. But the contents are anti-Nazi jokes.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BERNE, Switzerland. HEARD a new Nazi joke today," says one German to another. "What do I get for telling it?"

"Probably six months in a concentration camp." Despite this hazard, there are plenty of Nazi jokes being told in Germany. Afraid to express open criticism of the Hitler dictatorship because of its repressive policy toward citizens who disagree with it, many Germans opposed to the Nazi regime are finding an outlet for their feelings by inventing and passing on satirical stories reflecting on their rulers.

Largely by word of mouth the jokes circulate in Germany. They are passed from person to person cautiously and the chuckles over them are discreet, for the government strongly disapproves of this subterranean humor with itself as the butt. More than one anti-Nazi who hasn't been quite cautious enough in his jesting has been rounded up by the secret police. Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment, has been campaigning vigorously against the surreptitious jesting. A Nazi publication, Die Brennessel (The Nettles), says, "Our movement tolerates no humor." In accord with this policy was the publication of a book in Berlin, "Hitler in der Karikature," in which Dr. Ernst H. F. Hanfstaengl painstakingly examined many caricatures of the Reichsfuehrer by cartoonists all over the world and carefully picked flaws in them as misrepresentations of his chief.

In view of this official attitude, it is easy to understand the hard relish with which dissatisfied citizens of the Reich spread this quip: A German traveling abroad was asked, "How are things with your people?" "Well," he answered, "they can't complain."

The "underground" jokes travel rapidly. A secretly circulated publication says: "In a few hours, they have spread through all Berlin; a day later, the provinces know them; after 24 hours, they are familiar abroad."

After they pass beyond German borders that the jests at the expense of Nazism come out into the open. They find their way into foreign newspapers and magazines. A good example has been collected in a series of pamphlets by Ernst Friedrich, a German editor now in exile, who served a term in a concentration camp because of his connection with the anti-Nazi movement. The pamphlets, titled in Paris, bear the title "Man fluestert in Deutschland" (One Whispers in Germany), and have attained popularity among refugees from Germany and others who dislike Nazism. They have had a limited secret circulation in Germany. Another pamphlet of anti-Nazi humor is expressly designed for smuggling into Germany and ruled by Hitler; its pages of vicious shafts directed against the leaders that he in the Third Reich are known by a brown cover which is a reproduction of the cover of the official S. A. (Storm Troopers) songbook.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler is of course, the subject of these jests. In one anecdote, a teacher asks each student what career he would choose if he were Hitler's son. The replies are various: one lad would be a member of the S. A.; another would go into the Reichswehr; a third aspires to be an aviator. At length comes the turn of the son of an exiled liberal. "If I were Hitler's son," he says, "I should like most to be an orphan."

Covers of Ernst Friedrich's two books of anti-Nazi jokes: "Man fluestert in Deutschland" (One Whispers in Germany.)

Another story plays upon the Fuehrer's favorite phrases, familiar to all Germans from his orations. Hitler is undergoing an operation, and the surgeon tells him to count aloud as he goes under the anesthetic. Hitler counts drowsily: "One, two, three, four . . . 12, 13 (then reaches a shouting climax) 14 years of bondage under the Versailles Treaty and Marxian regime . . ."

A YOUNG Storm Trooper, thinking it would be amusing to throw a groundless scare into a Jewish shopkeeper, entered his shop and asked for a Hitler herring. The merchant, having never heard of such a fish, apologetically admitted that he had none. The Nazi, pretending great indignation, said unless there was one in stock before the end of the day the shop would be wrecked.

Later in the day, when the trooper happened to pass the place, the Jew called him in. "I have a Hitler herring for you now," he said. "The devil you have," said the Nazi. "Why, there isn't such a thing." "Oh, yes," the shopkeeper said, "there is; I made it myself." "Made it yourself? How?" asked the puzzled Nazi. The Jew explained: "I simply took a Bismarck herring, removed the brains and backbone, and opened its mouth."

General Herman Wilhelm Goering, Air Minister, is frequently ridiculed on the score of his love for numerous and fanciful uniforms. When the winter's supply of coal arrives, it is related, he dons miner's costume. When a bathroom pipe develops a leak; he is found, in Admiral's uniform, superintending repairs. He has had some of his more important decorations duplicated in rubber. It is related, so he may wear them in the bath tub. A paper manufacturer once delighted Goering by sending him a uniform made of cellophane, making possible the feat of wearing two costumes at once.

There are no limits to Goering's efforts, in the anecdotes, to attain personal splendor. One story has him undergoing an operation to shorten his left arm, so he may wear the ex-Kaiser's many gorgeous uniforms.

Another says that shortly after Von Hindenburg's death, Goering seriously contemplated suicide, so impressed was he by the magnificent state funeral given the late President.

General Goering, representing Germany at the funeral of King Alexander, is met at the Belgrade station by a Yugoslav official, it is related. Noting several large trunks being unloaded from the train, the official asks, "Your uniforms, Herr Minister?" "Oh, no," replies Goering, "those are only the index files of my uniforms. My clothes are coming on a special train."

Another anecdote celebrates Goering's role in the "blood purge" of last June 30. A foreign diplomat hears of his bear-hunting trip in Poland. "Oh," says the envoy in surprise, "then you shoot animals, too?"

Because of his reputation for ability to choose the winning side, Dr. Goebbels is the subject of this alleged biographical sketch: "In the Third Reich, Minister of Propaganda Goebbels. In the Fourth Reich, Count von Goebbels. In the Fifth Reich, People's Commissar Goebbels."

He is also included by the storytellers in the firm of Fascist Photographers, Inc. In this concern, Mussolini does the developing, Hitler the copying and Goebbels the enlarging.

The Nazi triumvirate, of course, figures in many anecdotes. For instance, its conference to decide on what each would do should the Third Reich collapse. These decisions emerge:

General Goering: "I shall have one of my fastest planes ready, for flight to refuge abroad."

Dr. Goebbels: "I shall retire to the Ghetto, and they'll never find me." (This has reference to his Semitic appearance.)

Reichsfuehrer Hitler: "No one will dare harm me, for, don't forget, I'm a foreigner."

Another tells of a former liberal, who has been forced to buy pictures of Nazi leaders. He takes the pictures home, and his wife asks: "What shall we do with them?" "Oh," he replies, "we'll hang Goering and Goebbels, and stand Hitler against the wall."

Then there is the German child's prayer, which is said to end: "And God, please take care of Hitler, Goering and Goebbels; you have already taken care of Roehm."

The formerly powerful S. A. comes in for its share of jests. This one goes back to its early days of prestige:

A candidate for Storm Troop membership undergoing the required physical examination gives these vital statistics in response to questions: "My mother died at 57 of heart disease and my father at 49 of pneumonia." "Refused!" roars the recruiting officer at hearing of this unfavorable ancestry.

The man next in line profits by this example and answers the questions thus: "My mother died at age 98 in childbirth, and my father at 102 in an airplane accident." "Accepted!" exclaims the officer.

S. A. men were privileged characters in those days.

Here is the decision ascribed to a Judge when one of them was brought before him: "You are charged with robbing and murdering a Jew. I am obliged to punish you for this offense. You are therefore fined five marks and reprimanded. Please don't be angry with me and speak a good word for me, if you will be so kind, to your troop leader."

A well-known Munich actor about this time had the audacity to make a joke about the extravagance of Storm Troop leaders. "I saw a remarkable thing the other day," he told his audience. "I saw a Rolls-Royce, and there was not a single Storm Trooper in it." For this, he was suspended from the stage, and won reinstatement only by promising the authorities he would apologize. So when he returned to the boards he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I find I have made a very serious mistake. I told you I had seen a Rolls-Royce, and there was not a single Storm Trooper in it. Now I want to correct that. There was a Storm Trooper in it."

Another anecdote, vouched for as a fact, relates the strange utterance of a Storm Trooper retiring for the night. Flinging his uniform on the floor, he exclaims: "There lies the Nazi; the Communist now is going to bed." His landlady, spying in the hallway, overhears and reports his words, and the man is sent to a concentration camp.

After the "blood purge," the S. A. men's "vacation," the diminution of the force and finally its disarmament, this story was created:

A Storm Trooper comes upon a Jew, weeping in the Alexanderplatz, Berlin. "What are you crying about?" the S. A. man says. "He never promised you anything."

Because the Jew is a chronic and inveterate raconteur, the crop of Semitic anecdotes from the Third Reich is of great profusion. In one of these Hitler is in consultation with a fortune teller. "And when shall I die?" asks the Fuehrer. "That I cannot tell you," answers the soothsayer; "except that the stars show you will die on a Jewish holiday." Hitler demands an explanation. "Well," answers the fortune teller, "any day on which you die will be a Jewish holiday."

EVEN serious grievances bring their anecdotes. Mayer meets his friend Cohen in a sadly battered state, heavily bandaged, one arm in a sling and hobbling on crutches. "Whatever has happened to you?" asks Mayer. "Don't speak to me," warns Cohen. "I don't exist, I'm just an atrocity myth."

A Jewish merchant in Berlin, at the time of the boycott, is ordered to notify his friends abroad that all is going well. So he sends this telegram to a co-religionist in Prague: "All well. Business fine. None of our people molested. Tell all this to our friend Oser." The last word makes all clear to the recipient, for it is the Yiddish equivalent of "Oh, yeah?"

The anecdotalists tell of a meeting of the Nazi high command. "I shall not rest until the last Jew is driven out of Germany!" Hitler exclaims. Goebbels leaps up in protest. "But if our four-year plan is not a success?" he asks. "If there are no Jews left, on whom can we blame the failure?"

Nazi insistence on Aryan supremacy in all activities in the Reich inspired this one:

A. I understand Cohen has been elected head of the synagogue.

B. What! A Jew?

There are other anecdotes galore, about the use of "Hell Hitler" as a form of greeting, for example:

"Why must we now say, 'Hell Hitler,' instead of 'Good day' and 'Good night'?" one German asks another. "Because," is the reply, "there is no longer a good day or a good night in Germany."

The phrase has become even the accepted form for closing letters. This is said to have irritated a Dutch correspondent of a German firm into elaborate sarcasm. He ended his next letter with the words:

"Our dear Queen Wilhelmina sends her greetings to you."

A current aphorism may be accepted as summarizing the anti-Nazi humor. It runs as follows: When God made the world, He gave mankind three gifts, but limited each person's choice to two of them. The three gifts were intelligence, honesty and National Socialism. So, if a man is intelligent and is a National Socialist, he is not honest. If he is honest and is a National Socialist, he is not intelligent. And if he is honest and intelligent, he is not a National Socialist.

The Pogrom Wave. "I see the paper is attacking the Jews again. Watch out, there's going to be another wage cut." —From Arbeiter Illustrierte Zeitung (AIZ) Prague.

Jackets, Ensembles and Evening Gowns From the Late Collections Feature Charming and Youthful Effects

A CHARMING variety of frocks and gowns, ranging from tailored suits to the most frivolous of evening gowns for late spring and early summer wear is illustrated today.

Three models typical of the spring mode are shown in the center panel. To the left is a sports suit of gray jersey worn with a navy jersey pull-over upon which gray coin dots are applied. In the center is an all-day ensemble of navy cloque which combines a simple frock with a sleeveless coat. The dainty ruffles at wrists and throat are of starched handkerchief linen. A charming frock for general wear is Borea's scarlet jersey shown at right.

In strong contrast to frocks of this type are evening gowns shown at upper right. Both of these models are of the soft, flattering type, so delightful for spring wear. Lelong's blue-gray crepe satin is a triumph of simplicity, with its graceful lines and exquisite diamond ornament holding the classic drapery in place. From the Borea collection comes the peach satin, with its trained skirt and lavish cape trimmed with white fox. The flowers clustered at the décolleté are of velvet.

To the immediate left is shown one of the new afternoon ensembles—a charming model in black taffeta cloque. The cloque is like an inch square quilting, very puffy and light and done with elastic. A striking note is found in the use of delft blue for the girdle and coat lining.

A MURDER in the LABORATORY

By GEORGE BARTON

THE tale of the tragedy of Charles Henry Schwartz, chemist, plant manager and promoter of the Pacific Cellulose Company, reads like something torn from the pages of an extravagant story book. The plot is laid in California and it moved from Martinez to Walnut Creek and then to an Oakland apartment house and finally to a damp slab, the morgue. Everybody that knew Schwartz would have said unhesitatingly that he was a man with a great future. He had many of the qualities of a good promoter and yet he seemed most at home when he was in his laboratory experimenting with the elements which are a closed book to the average person.

July 30, 1925, was to be a dramatic date in the career of this unusual man. On that day he remained longer than usual in the testing room of the company which he had helped to organize and from which he hoped to get on beyond the dreams of average. One by one the other men connected with the plant left, but Schwartz was so absorbed in his work that he barely noticed he was gradually being left alone. The testimony agrees that he was in his usual good spirits on the eve of that eventful night.

Charles Henry Schwartz was a quiet, thoughtful man, so intent on his experiments that there were times when he did not appear to know what was going on around him.

He was self-contained, had a devoted wife and possessed a particular love for children. His one enthusiasm was for the business in which he was engaged. He was sure there was millions in it, but he was always trying to perfect certain details of the manufacturing side of the plant and it appeared to be that purpose which kept him late on the night of which we speak.

MRS. SCHWARTZ, with a wife's devotion, was disturbed when he failed to appear at the usual hour, but just when the suspense was beginning to become acute the telephone rang and she heard her husband's voice on the other end of the wire.

"I'm sorry to be late," he said, "but I'll be home in 20 minutes." But he never came home and Mrs. Schwartz never saw him alive again.

It was barely five minutes after the telephone message when there was a terrific explosion in the laboratory of the Pacific Cellulose Company and when the smoke had cleared away the plant was a wreck. The police came scurrying to the place and the fire department was called out. They did the best they could, but it was not long before all that remained of the manufacturing concern was a mass of charred timber and bent steel.

Mrs. Schwartz was almost prostrated when she heard the shocking news. She told the police on the telephone call she had begged and the work of searching for the body began. The problem was whether Schwartz had left the place before the explosion had occurred. As he did not get home it was taken for granted that he must have been in the place when the crash came.

The theory was that he had been working with some dangerous chemicals and that the unexpected happened. It is easy to understand how that might have happened about with such an inflammable compound as cellulose. The searchers discussed this and went about their work and the consensus was that Charles Henry Schwartz was just one of the long line of inventors who had given up life in the cause of science. It was a big and laborious job, but when the almost hopeless, workmen were rewarded by the sight of a man lying sticking out of the debris of the laboratory in which Schwartz had been conducting his experiments. It was the dead body of a man.

It was brought forth from the ruins and placed on a stretcher there for the purpose. Hence it was taken to the morgue and then began the business of identifying the remains. The charred and battered body was all but unrecognizable. The features had been so blurred that no one could tell what they looked like. But the body was most precisely the size of the man. The remains of the body and certain other details satisfied the examiners that it must have been the body of Schwartz. The final clue was a missing tooth in the mouth of the dead man. It corresponded precisely with a cavity that had been one of the conspicuous marks of the inventor.

The identification was as complete as anything of the kind could be in the circumstances. First, it was the widow who expressed the belief that the remains were those of her husband; then it was the lawyer who testified that in all human probability the body was that of Schwartz and finally it was the doctor who called attention to the marks of resemblance between the body found in the ruins and that of his former patient.

The first reaction was one of sincere regret that the world had been deprived of the services of a man who might have done great things in the field of science.

But the strain of sadness was abruptly halted by the unexpected introduction of a new note. It was learned that Schwartz was heavily insured. There seems to have been some difference of opinion regarding the amount, but at one time it was placed at $100,000. The officers of the insurance company proved to be very hard-boiled, not to say skeptical. They were exacting with a vengeance. They not only wanted to be shown, but they insisted upon being convinced.

The police had been dubious from the outset and a final postmortem led to the surprising but positive announcement that the body was not that of Charles Henry Schwartz. There were a number of convincing details which led to this conclusion. One was that the tips of the fingers had been cut off; another was that the face and hands had been covered with acid which had the effect of making them unrecognizable, and last, but by no means least, it was demonstrated beyond a doubt that the missing tooth had been chiseled out.

The theory of the police was that Schwartz had substituted the body of another man in order that he might get the heavy insurance. Just how he expected to do this was never made clear, but all of the events leading up to the explosion and the finding of the charred body led the officers of the law to believe that their theory was correct. The claim was made that Schwartz had hunted until he found a man who closely resembled him in height and form and then made this unfortunate person his victim in carrying out a carefully-planned conspiracy.

The police were confronted with two big question marks. First, who was the man whose body was found in the wreckage? Secondly, if it was not Schwartz, as they were satisfied it was not, what had become of the inventor? Descriptions of the man were sent far and wide. The police of other cities and states were invited to join the chase.

The most important step in the solution of the problem lay in discovering the identity of the man who had been found in the ruins. In one of the many examinations of the body it was found that the skull had been crushed as if with some heavy blunt instrument. This might have been the result of the explosion, but the police preferred to believe that it was only another evidence of foul play. In their endeavor to find the name of the victim they used the process of elimination. This was not difficult, because only a few persons were employed in the factory of the Pacific Cellulose Company. It could hardly be called a "going" concern, because it was always preparing to go into operation without actually making a start. Schwartz was interested in the sale of the stock and as it did not go very well he was discouraged. The investigators concluded that he was facing a financial crisis, and this was a reason for the scheme which had been carefully planned and executed.

One employee was missing, Joe Rodriguez, a laborer. Perhaps he was the victim. But something happened to destroy that theory completely. Joe Rodriguez, looking as brown as a berry and with a broad grin on his swarthy face, walked into the police station and "I was in an automobile accident there and there was booze in my car."

assured the authorities he was alive. Filled with the spirit of adventure, he had left the town on the afternoon of the explosion and had kept on walking until he reached a community where he got another job which paid very little, but paid that little regularly. He was not much of a newspaper reader, but did see the story of the blast at the cellulose factory and later learned that he was looked upon as the victim. So, in his slow, drawing fashion, he had wandered back to Walnut Creek to assure the police that the report of his death had been very much exaggerated.

The work of finding the identity of the charred corpse had to be started all over again.

IN the meantime a most important discovery had been made. The searchers found a collection of religious books and papers on the floor of the wrecked laboratory. Some of them were hymnals such as are used by wandering evangelists. There were also a number of little cards containing Sunday school lessons. Most of them had notations in a clear, legible hand. Who did they belong to? Surely not to Schwartz, who had never given any indication of a religious turn of mind. Then it was recalled that a sort of self-appointed missionary had been in the neighborhood shortly before the explosion, and it was not long before the body was definitely identified as that of George W. Barbe, wandering missionary, a college graduate and a "hobo of refinement and peace."

Later inquiries proved that Barbe was a native of Pennsylvania. He was an odd person, inclined to be eccentric, but sincerely and zealously devoted to his chosen calling. He did good in his humble way, but above all he was the sort of man who would not harm another under any kind of provocation.

By the irony of fate he was chosen to be the victim in this sacrifice of fire.

The identity of the corpse proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, the police now turned to the work of running down Schwartz with renewed energy. They believed—whether correctly or not—that Schwartz, after finding the man that suited his purpose, had enticed him into the laboratory, had struck him on the head with an iron bar and then caused the explosion that blew up the works. His hope, apparently, was that the body would be so far consumed by fire that none would doubt that it was his own. And that might have been the case if it had not been for the clue of the chiseled-out tooth.

The very thing which he expected would make confirmation as strong as holy writ was the detail that proved to be his undoing. And now the plot of this amazing story from true life takes us into a by-path which has an important bearing upon the case. The scene is laid in the city of Oakland, situated on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay. Many of the merchants and business men of the larger city make their homes in Oakland, which is a very attractive place to live. Only four miles distant, at Berkeley, is the University of California.

In Oakland was the Nottingham Apartment, managed by C. W. Hayward. In the course of his travels around the city he made the casual acquaintance of a man who went by the name of Harold Warren. The stranger had a pleasant smile and agreeable manners. On the afternoon of the night of the explosion he called on Hayward.

"I would like to rent a desirable apartment for a while if you have one that is vacant," he said.

"Sure," was the response, "I'll be glad to accommodate you." Harold Warren only took a casual glance at the suite that was shown him and immediately said he would take it. He was not sure when he could take possession, but said it was likely to be late that night. The two men separated with mutual expressions of good will and then the apartment house manager forgot the incident. But at 4 o'clock the next morning the new tenant made his way into the place and roused Hayward from his slumbers. Rubbing his eyes drowsily the manager noticed that Warren was very much disheveled. His clothes were torn, he limped and his face and hands were bruised.

"I'd like to get into my apartment," he said.

"Very well," was the reply, "but what's the matter with you?"

"I have had trouble with the police in Santa Clara," he cried excitedly. "I was in an automobile accident there and there was booze in my car. There were three men with me. What happened to them I don't know. But I escaped with a sprained ankle. I will have to lay low for a while."

That did not sound so good to the apartment house manager, but he accepted the situation philosophically and escorted the new tenant to his suite. The following morning, the telephone and called police headquarters. The desk sergeant who was on duty was indifferent at first, but when he discovered what was on the mind of Hayward he was all attention.

made a bowl of punch for the participants, introduced new games in which he took part and led "the grand march." Later one of the girls invited him to dance with her.

"I'm sorry," he replied, "but my injured foot makes that impossible. It is a great regret, because I love to dance." Mr. C. W. Hayward, the manager of the Nottingham Apartments, became quite interested in his new tenant. Instinctively, he felt that he was a man out of the ordinary. On several occasions he discussed Harold Warren with his friends. One night when he was dining out he happened to mention the fact that one of his lodgers had gotten into a scrape and was hiding in his apartment. He explained the man's car had been wrecked and whisky had been found in it. Everybody was interested in this narrative and in the course of it the conversation veered around to the Schwartz case. A man in the party brought forth a picture of Schwartz. Hayward looked at it casually, then something impelled him to give it closer study.

The eyes and the nose attracted him particularly. There was a strangely familiar look in the newspaper cut. He placed his hand across the mouth and like a flash his suspicion was turned into certainty. Almost unconsciously he was comparing the picture with his boarder. One had a mustache and the other did not, but with that eliminated they were almost identical.

Hayward made a rush for the telephone and called police headquarters. The desk sergeant who was on duty was indifferent at first, but when he discovered what was on the mind of Hayward he was all attention.

ing from a wound under the right eye. That one glance was sufficient to tell the story.

The wounded man was Charles Henry Schwartz, the inventor for whom they had been searching for many days.

He had sensed the meaning of this early morning call and in the brief time between the first knock on the door and the unceremonious entrance of the police he had resolved to take justice in his own hands. They rushed him to the Oakland Emergency Hospital, but when he was placed on the operating table the breath had already left his body.

The inventor had followed his victim into eternity. When his wife was notified she collapsed. It was quite evident that she was as much surprised as the police. Clinging to the belief that the body found in the ruins was that of her husband, this second shock was too much for the poor woman to bear. She could throw no light whatever upon the meaning of what had now become a second tragedy.

WITH Schwartz dead beyond recall, the officers of the law hurried back to the apartment to search for clues that would give tangible evidence concerning the real meaning of what had happened. The pistol was there, but that proved nothing beyond the fact that the harassed and hunted man had committed suicide. They looked around the room to discover something that might throw additional light on the sensational proceedings. Just when it seemed as though the search was going to be fruitless they found an envelope—a sealed envelope—on the top of the bureau. It was addressed to "My dear wife and children." This remarkable communication threw a flood of light on the whole amazing case. It was at once a confession and a defense. It was the cry of a desperate man who had given up all hope of escape. The more important parts of it read as follows:

"I am writing you without making any excuses, but one thing I will tell you. I am not guilty of the crime they accuse me of. Last Monday or Tuesday a man called at the factory for work. I was in the lab. He came straight in. We talked to each other for a while when suddenly the man told me if I wouldn't give him work I would have to give him money.

"He attacked me. I gave him a blow on his head. He fell. I gave him another. I never thought for a moment to let it go, but I could not make up my mind to go to Bell (Schwartz's lawyer) and tell him.

"I decided to run away but made a dirty job of it. I put the man in the closet. I do not know the man, never looked how he was dressed, never touched him after that.

"THE only thing I did was, I tried to burn him, to wipe out and go—go I do not know where.

"Can you imagine how I felt all the time, feeling I had to lose you and the dear boys? Oh, God, how I suffered!

"If I had not this damned suit of Mrs. Ad (referring to Elizabeth Adams of Oakland, who had sued him for breach of promise), I would have gone through with that, but it was impossible.

"I did not plan before this happened. No. I was so glad to go on so nicely with my work and to have you and the boys with me, and then the end came of this beautiful dream.

"I went home to take all my photos and all I was in need of was to have a few words with you. I have kissed the boys good-by but not you. So I kiss this in bidding you good-by."

On the face of it, this was a deathbed confession and for that reason to be accepted, but it was impossible to make the police believe that the affair had not been carefully planned, or that he had not deliberately selected the unfortunate Barbe as his victim in carrying out the plot. The suicide of the culprit ended the story.

He had paid the wages of sin—which is death.

LESLIE HOWARD

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in the proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Leslie Howard. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by him in these roles in the following movies: Sir Percy Blakeney in "The Scarlet Pimpernel"; Philip Carey in "Of Human Bondage," and Peter Standish in "Berkeley Square."

Next week: Heather Angel.

And the Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

THE CHARACTERS

MR. MOLE—An angry old miner.
BILL BUNNY—Mr. Mole's horrified host.
DR. H. HOOT—The local physician.
THE EASTER BUNNY—An innocent victim.

It was bad enough to have Mr. Mole come to the Bunny home to hide after he stole the eyes from an idol worshiped by the little people who live inside the earth, and to have those angry little people prowling around night after night terrifying everyone as they hunted for the eyes. But to have the gruff old miner fly into a rage when he, in turn, had the eyes stolen from him, and to have him knock things down as he thrashes madly around with his long stick, is much worse. Poor Bill and Dr. Hoot are having a hard time keeping out of angry old Mr. Mole's way. They are hiding in Bill's bedroom. Suddenly Mr. Mole dashes in, holding a hard, bright object in his hand as

THE PLAY BEGINS

MR. MOLE—What's this thing? I just found it in the kitchen. It wasn't there yesterday. (Bill comes over and takes the object out of Mr. Mole's hand and looks at it very closely.)
BILL BUNNY—Why, it's nothing to be alarmed at. It's an Easter egg.
MR. MOLE—How did it get into the kitchen?
BILL BUNNY—No doubt the Easter Bunny put it there. He was here last night. I talked to him just a little while before those folks from inside the earth came. (Mr. Mole becomes very excited and beats upon the floor with his stick.)

MR. MOLE—(Yelling) Then he's the thief. He was here first. Take me over to his house. I'll get those eyes back. Dr. Hoot, you come, too. Then you can put them in place of my own weak eyes. (Despite Bill's pleading, Mr. Mole insists on having his way. And a moment later they start for the Easter Bunny's home.)
BILL BUNNY—Now it's understood that the Easter Bunny is not to be harmed or his studio molested. Because I know he'll be able to prove to you that he has not got those eyes.
MR. MOLE—But he's got to prove it. (They reach the Easter Bunny's home. Mr. Mole pushes Bill aside and starts knocking loudly on the door.)
BILL BUNNY—Now remember, no rough stuff. (But Bill no sooner says this than the impatient Mr. Mole shoves the door open and dives in. A moment later a terrible noise is heard coming from the Easter Bunny's home as easel, table and chairs crash noisily to the floor. Bill and Dr. Hoot are too dumfounded to move. In a little while they recover and go in. What a sight greets their eyes! Everything is topsy turvy. Even the Easter rabbit has been knocked down. Suddenly Mr. Mole pokes his head from underneath the rug.)
MR. MOLE—He hasn't got them. I proved that myself. (He pauses for a moment.) But someone has. Whose got those eyes? (For a moment the Easter Bunny is forgotten as the others ponder this important question.)

BILL BUNNY—(To himself.) I don't know. But I hope those little people have. After all, the eyes belong to their idol.
MR. MOLE—(To himself.) I would suspect this fellow, Bunny, but I don't think he has the courage to do anything like that. Besides, what good would the eyes do him?
DR. HOOT—(To himself.) I think this Mr. Mole is crazy. I don't think he ever had any eyes in that package in the first place.

"THE MADDEST, MERRIEST DAY"—In Honolulu May Day is the occasion for a riotous display of flowers. This year's Queen of the May is Miss Mabel Likelike Lucas, shown here wearing her leis of carnations and gardenias—and a wistful Hawaiian smile. —Associated Press photo.

NEW COLLEGE SPORT — Six-day bicycle racing has come to the University of Georgia, where members of two fraternities managed to drag themselves away from their books for a week's leg work. Here are Stuart Witham (Chi Phi) and Omar Franklin (S. A. E.). —Associated Press Wirephoto.

INSEPARABLE—Living together in a house in Pueblo, Colorado, are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Loveless (left) and Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Loveless. Husbands and wives are identical twins, were married together, share exactly similar possessions. The brothers, both veterinarians, work together in the Bureau of Animal Husbandry. The wives, Lela and Lola, share housework.

"FORGOTTEN MAN OF THE NEW DEAL" — A family of sharecroppers, living on an Arkansas plantation, getting half the value of their crop (minus deductions for "furnish") from their landlord. Recently many like these have joined the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union in hopes of ending a post-Civil War system which, urban observers believe, fosters destitution, shiftlessness, and virtual peonage.

STILL IN UNIFORM—A striking photographic study of Babe Ruth as he stooped to select a bat for practice before the inaugural game between the Braves and the Giants in New York.

THE BEAUTIES OF BALI

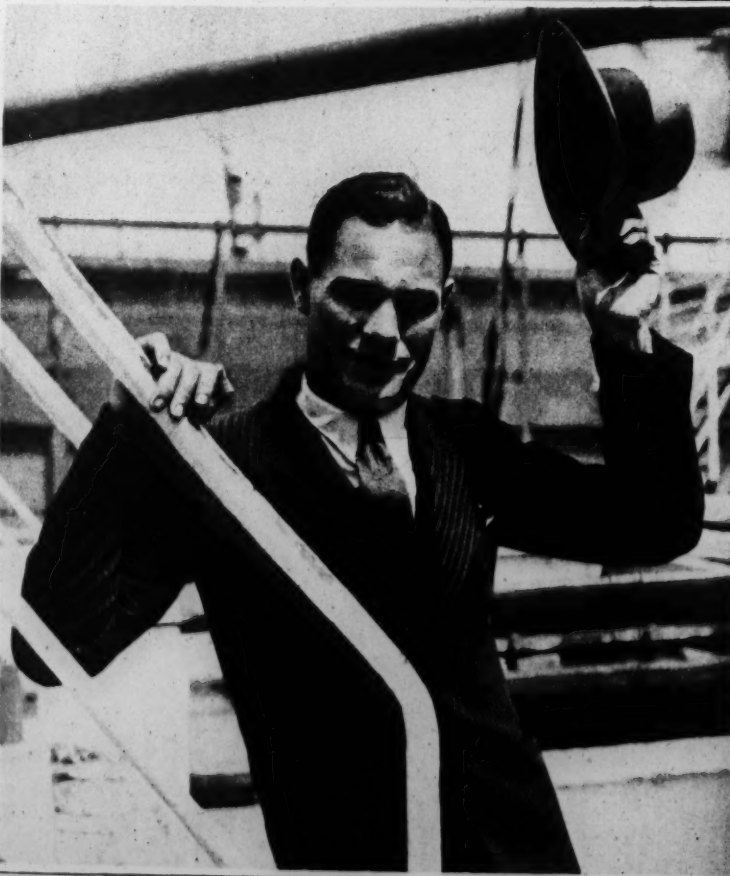

A Djanger dancer in the South Sea island of Bali, where the art has reached a remarkable degree of perfection, being made up before taking part in one of the dances. Famous the world over for their beauty, these girls are thoroughly nonchalant about their audience, before or during the performance.

VISITOR FROM A MINIATURE OTHER-WORLD—Donald Glass, native of Tristan da Cunha, a mid-South Atlantic island so remote that its 170 inhabitants didn't know of the World War until after the Armistice, is shown arriving in New York. A crew member of S. S. Empress of Australia, he is the first person from his island ever to visit America.

IN HER RHINESTONE DAYS Mae West was a burlesque trouper three years after the date affixed to a marriage license which has lately turned up in Milwaukee. She is shown at that time, when she played in Chicago. From Hollywood Miss West pooh-poohed the story of her early marriage to a vaudeville comedian.

When a girl needs a girl friend

"Those were his very words!"
"What do you suppose that new young doctor said to Jack after the dance the other night? When Jack asked him how he liked the rush Jane was giving him, he just looked bored and said, 'Why doesn't some kind girl friend tell her she needs Mum?' Those were his very words. Imagine! After the way we girls have all tried to ease it over to her! Can we help it if she's dumb?"

What an old meanie she is for not telling!
"Mr. Glover said he was afraid he'd have to let Ann go. Wish I had the nerve to tell her what's the matter. It's such a pity when a jar of Mum would save her job for her."

"Your references as to ability are very good. Miss Clark. But I hardly think you'd fill the requirements of our position here. Sorry."

SHE'S bound to lose out every time—the girl who is careless about underarm perspiration odor. For people will not excuse this kind of unpleasantness when it is so easy to avoid. With Mum!

It takes only half a minute to use Mum. And it lasts all day. Use it any time—when dressing or afterwards. It won't harm your clothing.

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

Pitching Motions

Get the Body Into the Pitch

Left: Weight on the right foot, for a righthand pitcher, with arm and body brought back as far as possible. This adds to a pitcher's speed.

A Southpaw Completing His Motion

Finish of the Pitch

Let the ball go with the full swing of arm and body. The step forward is made a trifle in advance of these combined motions. The wrist snap also adds speed.

Left: The righthander at the finish of his delivery. He is ready to field the ball if it is hit into his territory.
